Memorial day dawned clear and bright, and at an early hour there were signs of unusual activity about Grand Army headquarters.

Decorating in the outlying cemeteries was finished up during the forenoon, the work having been done by committees from the Grand Army and Sons of Veterans. The soldiers of the Spanish-American war had a well organized arrangement for the decoration of the graves of their comrades, and carriages containing potted plants were used in hauling the flowers to the several burying rounds. After the various committees had finished their work there was not a grave in any of the cemeteries that had been missed.

By noon everything was in readiness for the Memorial exercises at Riverview cemetery, and the program to be carried out as had been previously arranged. Rev. S. B. Salmon, the speaker of the day, arrived in the city yesterday and is being entertainew by members of his old congregation in the East End.

All stores were closed throughout the entire day, merchants and business men, together with the citizens in general, entering into the spirit of the occasion in order to aid and encourage the old soldiers in the work of perpetuating the memory of our honored dead.

GOVERNOR NASH IS SERIOUSLY ILL

His Condition at Present Little Short of Alarming to His Friends.

LIKE ONE WALKING ON AIR

Is the Way He Describes His Sensations—Confined to His Bed And Absolute Rest And Inaction Prescrib- By His Physicians.

Columbus, May 30.—The condition of Governor Nash is little short of alarming, in spite of the attempts of his immediate friends to discredit the reports. The best physicians of the city have been called into consultation and no two agree as to the approximate cause of Mr. Nash's collapse. The governor is confined to his bed, and, while his mental faculties are unimpaired, he has practically lost the use of his lower limbs.

One of the physicians in attendance prescribes absolute rest and inaction, ascribing the cause for the trouble to be a ruptured blood vessel in some part of the body. Another physician thinks it possible that some of the fluid of the spinal cord has been displaced.

Governor Nash says that he has no feeling and describes his attempts to walk as "walking in the air." His condition dates from the time when the train in which he returned from California was passing through Royal Gorge, 60 miles west of Denver, when he suddenly sank to the floor. He has had to be assisted to walk ever since.

TAX LEVY FIXED BY CITY FATHERS

Several Other Matters Received the Attention of Council Last Evening.

TROLLEY LINE EXTENSION

Of the Calcutta Road Line Much Discussed—Ordinance Amended And Passed—Extension to the East End Provided For.

With one exception the city solons attended in full the adjourned meeting of council last night. Thomas was the only absent member. The session was late in starting, but after work was once begun the business left over from the previous meeting was rushed through without delay.

A plat of lots owned by John Burford on Pleasant street was submitted and accepted, as was also another plat of lots on Calcutta road and Lincoln avenue belonging to Mrs. Elizabeth Smallwood. A plat submitted by Charles Smith was laid over until the next meeting.

The Bradshaw avenue assessing ordinance was brought up on second reading.

The ordinance providing for a franchise for the extension of the Calcutta road line of the East Liverpool Railway company from Riverview cemetery to the Thompson park was again brought up. Mr. Marshall objected to the passage of the ordinance on the grounds that the defects which had been found when it was first introduced had not been eliminated. He made a strong appeal to council to vote down the ordinance until the alterations had been made which were asked for.

Mr. Nice stated that he could see no reason why the ordinance should not be passed and thought it was an injustice to the street railway company, as well as to the residents along the route of the proposed extension to delay the matter.

Again Mr. Marshall took the floor and in plain terms defined his position in the case. He said it was no desire of his to delay the work, but he meant to look after the interests of the citizens and not the street railway company alone. He stated that if the ordinance provided for the extension of the Calcutta road line to the East End he would vote in favor of it; but he did not favor the purpose of the company to extend the line to the entrance to the park and allow it to end there.

Mr. W. L. Thompson was present and asked permission to speak. He stated that the street railway company proposed to eventually extend the line through the park and on to the East End, but owing to the heavy exptnse, Mr. Healy had not calculated on building the second extension until some time later.

It was finally agreed to add a clause to the ordinance providing for the extension of the line from the park to the East End, and on a motion by Mr. Cripps, which was readily seconded, the company was allowed until October 1, 1902, to build the second extension. The ordinance was then passed under a suspension of rules. The franchise will be subject to the same restrictions as those granted when the first street car tracks were laid in the city.

No other business remained for the consideration of the solons but the establishment of a tax levy. This, however, was the bone of contention, and the wise men knew it perfectly well. Before doing anything in the matter those of the august body who had a "two-for" in their pockets drew it forth and went to smoking, notwithstanding the rule prohibiting the practice. They had full permission to do so and no "kicks" were forthcoming.

The provision as made by Mr. Marshall in his list of figures relative to the establishment of a tax levy for a sinking fund was the only point discussed. Mr. Nice contended that it was not necessary that a sinking fund levy be made and quoted law to substantiate his claim. Mr. Marshall insisted that a sinking fund was absolutely necessary and that a tax was therefore essential.

It was finally agreed to drop the sinking fund allowance, and after almost an hour's figuring the levy for the different funds was decided on as follows:

General, 1.8; street, 1.2; sanitary, .2; light, 1.3; interest, .2; fire, 1.5; library, .3; park, .2. Although several alterations were made on the levy originally decided on by the finance committee, the total remains the same, while provision is made for a tax for park and library funds.

SHAMEFUL DESECRATION OF DAY SACRED TO HEROES

LINE ISLAND THE SCENE

A Large Number of Strangers Brought Their Game Birds There.

THE AUTHORITIES WILL ACT

In spite of the precautions and exertions of the authorities, Line Island bids fair to be the scene of disgraceful desecration of Memorial day.

A gang of about 30 sports, each one carrying game chickens, left the westbound train at the East End this morning. They were evidently at a loss to know just where to go, but after holding a short conference they started for Line Island. They made no attempt at concealment, and while the conference was being held the shrill voices of the chanticleers filled the air with music.

Among the "sports" were several colored fellows, and the whole aggregation looked tough enough to successfully cope with a goodly number of officers should an attempt be made to arrest them.

The Hancock county officers were informed of the arrival of the law-defiers soon after the train reached the East End, and a determined effort will be made to stop the fight before it proceeds far.

It is known that several local sports sent cocks to the island early this morning, and also that several chickens arrived on the up-train last evening.

The sports claim that they have arrangements made by which a small steamboat will arrive at the island shortly before noon and that if the officers interfere they will go on the boat and finish the fights there, thus getting out of reach of state officers.

The West Virginia officers were informed some time ago of the fact that a cock fight would probably be held on Line Island today, and it was thought they would take action to prevent it. Either they gave no warning or the sports determined to defy their authority.

Sheriff C. F. Allison, of Hancock county, and Deputy Sheriff O. O. Allison were astir early. With about 15 men who had been deputized they started for the island at about 8 o'clock this morning, determined to arrest or drive away the crowd of "sports."

ISLAND DESERTED

SPORTS GOT WORD AND LEFT IN MUCH HASTE.

Went to Mill Creek, Where Their Law-Defying Sport Is Reported in Progress.

By 10 o'clock the island was deserted by the sports and their followers. They had spies out and got word that the officers were coming. They made all haste out of West Virginia and went over into Pennsylvania in the vicinity of Mill Creek, where it is reported the cocking mains are in progress as the News Review goes to press. Crowds are flocking to Mill Creek.

Officer Morris, of East Liverpool, and Deputy Sheriff Chris Bick are looking after the interests of the city and county to see that no mains are held in Ohio.

TAKEN SUDDENLY ILL

Earl McDole Brought Home From Marietta on the Ben Hur.

Earl McDole, who has been visiting in Marietta for two weeks, was taken suddenly ill and was brought to his home in this city on the Ben Hur last night. He was met at the wharf by his father and taken to his home and a physician summoned, who stated that he was suffering from a severe attack of pneumonia.

WILLIAM C. TROVER CAPTURED BY PATROLMAN WOODS.

Has Been a Fugitive From Justice for Nearly Two Months—Charged With a Serious Offense.

William C. Trover was arrested at an early hour this morning by Patrolman Pat Woods and is now locked in a cell at the city jail. Since April 10 Trover has been a fugitive from justice, at which time an affidavit was filed in Justice Rose's court by Mrs. Trover, charging her husband with the commission of a serious offense against her 14-year-old daughter, Agnes Potts.

A warrant was issued for the accused man and turned over to Constable Powell, but before the officer could lay hands on Trover he made his escape and fled to Pennsylvania. The city police force and patrolmen were instructed to arrest the man on sight and late last night he was seen by neighbors lurking about his wife's home in Gardendale and Patrolman Woods notified, who took him into custody.

Trover will be given a hearing this afternoon.

DREW A KNIFE

Joe Keenan Attacked an Installment Agent, But Nobody Was Hurt.

Joe Keenan and an installment agent had an altercation in a saloon in the Midway last night, and for a time it looked as though the fight would become general, as both parties had a number of supporters.

The party adjourned to the street, where Keenan drew a knife and made for the agent. They grappled for a short time, but the installment agent concluded that the odds were against him and ran. No arrests were made.

SOMETHING GOOD

FOR THE BOARD OF TRADE TO DELIBERATE UPON.

Secretary Travis Has Two Propositions Which Promise Well—Large Audience Expected.

A surprise is going to be sprung at the board of trade meeting which will be held at the city hall tomorrow evening. This is the assurance given by Secretary Travis, who, together with President Croxall, has been doing his utmost to induce a good attendance at the meeting.

As exclusively announced in the News Review of last Monday, there are two propositions from extensive manufacturers which will be submitted at the meeting of the board. Mr. Travis, who has been working on the deals, stated to a reporter this morning that he never knew of an offer more fair than those which he received from the parties he has been in communication with.

Mr. Travis declined to explain the nature of the offers and stated he had agreed to suppress any and all information regarding the identity of the manufacturers concerned until the proper time has arrived. However, he stated that there was every reason to believe that two large industries could be secured for East Liverpool and that the bonus—which is generally the great drawback—is of minor significance.

GOVERNOR NASH IS SERIOUSLY ILL

His Condition at Present Little Short of Alarming to His Friends.

LIKE ONE WALKING ON AIR

Columbus, May 30.—The condition of Governor Nash is little short of alarming, in spite of the attempts of his immediate friends to discredit the reports. The best physicians of the city have been called into consultation and no two agree as to the approximate cause of Mr. Nash's collapse. The governor is confined to his bed, and, while his mental faculties are unimpaired, he has practically lost the use of his lower limbs.

One of the physicians in attendance prescribes absolute rest and inaction, ascribing the cause for the trouble to be a ruptured blood vessel in some part of the body. Another physician thinks it possible that some of the fluid of the spinal cord has been displaced.

Governor Nash says that he has no feeling and describes his attempts to walk as "walking in the air." His condition dates from the time when the train in which he returned from California was passing through Royal Gorge, 60 miles west of Denver, when he suddenly sank to the floor. He has had to be assisted to walk ever since.

TAX LEVY FIXED BY CITY FATHERS

TROLLEY LINE EXTENSION

With one exception the city solons attended in full the adjourned meeting of council last night. Thomas was the only absent member. The session was late in starting, but after work was once begun the business left over from the previous meeting was rushed through without delay.

A plat of lots owned by John Burford on Pleasant street was submitted and accepted, as was also another plat of lots on Calcutta road and Lincoln avenue belonging to Mrs. Elizabeth Smallwood. A plat submitted by Charles Smith was laid over until the next meeting.

The Bradshaw avenue assessing ordinance was brought up on second reading.

The ordinance providing for a franchise for the extension of the Calcutta road line of the East Liverpool Railway company from Riverview cemetery to the Thompson park was again brought up. Mr. Marshall objected to the passage of the ordinance on the grounds that the defects which had been found when it was first introduced had not been eliminated. He made a strong appeal to council to vote down the ordinance until the alterations had been made which were asked for.

Mr. Nice stated that he could see no reason why the ordinance should not be passed and thought it was an injustice to the street railway company, as well as to the residents along the route of the proposed extension to delay the matter.

Again Mr. Marshall took the floor and in plain terms defined his position in the case. He said it was no desire of his to delay the work, but he meant to look after the interests of the citizens and not the street railway company alone. He stated that if the ordinance provided for the extension of the Calcutta road line to the East End he would vote in favor of it; but he did not favor the purpose of the company to extend the line to the entrance to the park and allow it to end there.

Mr. W. L. Thompson was present and asked permission to speak. He stated that the street railway company proposed to eventually extend the line through the park and on to the East End, but owing to the heavy exptnse, Mr. Healy had not calculated on building the second extension until some time later.

It was finally agreed to add a clause to the ordinance providing for the extension of the line from the park to the East End, and on a motion by Mr. Cripps, which was readily seconded, the company was allowed until October 1, 1902, to build the second extension. The ordinance was then passed under a suspension of rules. The franchise will be subject to the same restrictions as those granted when the first street car tracks were laid in the city.

No other business remained for the consideration of the solons but the establishment of a tax levy. This, however, was the bone of contention, and the wise men knew it perfectly well. Before doing anything in the matter those of the august body who had a "two-for" in their pockets drew it forth and went to smoking, notwithstanding the rule prohibiting the practice. They had full permission to do so and no "kicks" were forthcoming.

The provision as made by Mr. Marshall in his list of figures relative to the establishment of a tax levy for a sinking fund was the only point discussed. Mr. Nice contended that it was not necessary that a sinking fund levy be made and quoted law to substantiate his claim. Mr. Marshall insisted that a sinking fund was absolutely necessary and that a tax was therefore essential.

It was finally agreed to drop the sinking fund allowance, and after almost an hour's figuring the levy for the different funds was decided on as follows:

General, 1.8; street, 1.2; sanitary, .2; light, 1.3; interest, .2; fire, 1.5; library, .3; park, .2. Although several alterations were made on the levy originally decided on by the finance committee, the total remains the same, while provision is made for a tax for park and library funds.

SHAMEFUL DESECRATION OF DAY SACRED TO HEROES

LINE ISLAND THE SCENE

A Large Number of Strangers Brought Their Game Birds There.

In spite of the precautions and exertions of the authorities, Line Island bids fair to be the scene of disgraceful desecration of Memorial day.

A gang of about 30 sports, each one carrying game chickens, left the westbound train at the East End this morning. They were evidently at a loss to know just where to go, but after holding a short conference they started for Line Island. They made no attempt at concealment, and while the conference was being held the shrill voices of the chanticleers filled the air with music.

Among the "sports" were several colored fellows, and the whole aggregation looked tough enough to successfully cope with a goodly number of officers should an attempt be made to arrest them.

The Hancock county officers were informed of the arrival of the law-defiers soon after the train reached the East End, and a determined effort will be made to stop the fight before it proceeds far.

It is known that several local sports sent cocks to the island early this morning, and also that several chickens arrived on the up-train last evening.

The sports claim that they have arrangements made by which a small steamboat will arrive at the island shortly before noon and that if the officers interfere they will go on the boat and finish the fights there, thus getting out of reach of state officers.

The West Virginia officers were informed some time ago of the fact that a cock fight would probably be held on Line Island today, and it was thought they would take action to prevent it. Either they gave no warning or the sports determined to defy their authority.

Sheriff C. F. Allison, of Hancock county, and Deputy Sheriff O. O. Allison were astir early. With about 15 men who had been deputized they started for the island at about 8 o'clock this morning, determined to arrest or drive away the crowd of "sports."

ISLAND DESERTED

SPORTS GOT WORD AND LEFT IN MUCH HASTE.

By 10 o'clock the island was deserted by the sports and their followers. They had spies out and got word that the officers were coming. They made all haste out of West Virginia and went over into Pennsylvania in the vicinity of Mill Creek, where it is reported the cocking mains are in progress as the News Review goes to press. Crowds are flocking to Mill Creek.

Officer Morris, of East Liverpool, and Deputy Sheriff Chris Bick are looking after the interests of the city and county to see that no mains are held in Ohio.

LANDED IN JAIL

William C. Trover was arrested at an early hour this morning by Patrolman Pat Woods and is now locked in a cell at the city jail. Since April 10 Trover has been a fugitive from justice, at which time an affidavit was filed in Justice Rose's court by Mrs. Trover, charging her husband with the commission of a serious offense against her 14-year-old daughter, Agnes Potts.

A warrant was issued for the accused man and turned over to Constable Powell, but before the officer could lay hands on Trover he made his escape and fled to Pennsylvania. The city police force and patrolmen were instructed to arrest the man on sight and late last night he was seen by neighbors lurking about his wife's home in Gardendale and Patrolman Woods notified, who took him into custody.

Trover will be given a hearing this afternoon.

Joe Keenan and an installment agent had an altercation in a saloon in the Midway last night, and for a time it looked as though the fight would become general, as both parties had a number of supporters.

The party adjourned to the street, where Keenan drew a knife and made for the agent. They grappled for a short time, but the installment agent concluded that the odds were against him and ran. No arrests were made.

SOMETHING GOOD

FOR THE BOARD OF TRADE TO DELIBERATE UPON.

Secretary Travis Has Two Propositions Which Promise Well—Large Audience Expected.

A surprise is going to be sprung at the board of trade meeting which will be held at the city hall tomorrow evening. This is the assurance given by Secretary Travis, who, together with President Croxall, has been doing his utmost to induce a good attendance at the meeting.

As exclusively announced in the News Review of last Monday, there are two propositions from extensive manufacturers which will be submitted at the meeting of the board. Mr. Travis, who has been working on the deals, stated to a reporter this morning that he never knew of an offer more fair than those which he received from the parties he has been in communication with.

Mr. Travis declined to explain the nature of the offers and stated he had agreed to suppress any and all information regarding the identity of the manufacturers concerned until the proper time has arrived. However, he stated that there was every reason to believe that two large industries could be secured for East Liverpool and that the bonus—which is generally the great drawback—is of minor significance.

This will be done jointly by Mr. Aten, who holds the lease for the entire park, and the other parties. The grounds will be enclosed by a substantial fence, 16 feet in height along the railroad track and the east side of the park. Other changes will be made, such as grading, filling in and draining, so that the water can be kept from the diamond.

Mr. Aten reserves the skating privileges and the renting of the park for circus purposes.

NEGLECTED GRAVES

CANNOT BE SO BADLY NEGLECTED AFTER ALL.

Bodies Long Since Removed From the Old Graveyard to New Burial Places.

The report concerning the "forsaken dead" in the old Fifth street cemetery is denounced on every hand as a batch of misstatements. At the request of relatives of the departed ones whose graves are alleged to be shamefully neglected, J. M. Kelly has compiled a list of those whose bodies have been removed to Riverview cemetery. His figures show that 35 of the bodies removed were those of persons included in the list of the "desecrated" dead. Following are the names:

Sarah Hill, Harry Hill, Charlie Sebring, Mary Johnson, Elizabeth Boyce, Emma M. Croxall, William W. Devers, Mary Devers, D. C. Moore, Stephen Kent, Thomas Croxall, Hester Ann Knowles, Zillah Harker, Mary J. Morley, Ohio J. Smith, Mollie George, William Harvey, Margaret Brawdy, Thos. D. Blackmore, Elizabeth Blackmore, Harriet Blythe, Stanton Blythe, Josiah R. Gardner, Elijah Merchant, James Foster, M. H. Foutts, Flora Foutts, Lida R. Foutts, William Till, Caleb Till, Charles M. Thompson, Rosanna B. Farmer, May B. Farmer, Susan Colclough and Eliza Knowles.

In addition to the above list there have been perhaps as many more bodies removed from the old graveyard to the Spring Grove cemetery as to Riverview, and dozens of graves were made in the Catholic cemetery which contain the remains of those who were first laid to rest in the old burying ground.

It is asserted by many persons that of the 134 names of the dead alleged to be buried in the old cemetery not more than one-third of the bodies remain there at present.

TOOK FRENCH LEAVE

The Fire Station Boys' Pet No Longer Dwells With Them.

The boys at the fire station now mourn the loss of one of their pets. When Fred Martin returned from the Philippines he brought with him an animal plentiful at the islands and known as a mongrel, which he presented to the boys. They fixed up a cage for it and named it "Wallace." It has been a great attraction, large numbers calling at the station every day to see it, and it is supposed someone left the door of the cage open Tuesday night, and Wallace, not being overjoyed at his confinement, took French leave, and has not since been seen.

GOING TO WALES

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Jones, of the West End to Sail Tomorrow.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Jones, of the West End, will leave tomorrow morning for New York, whence they will sail on the Lucania for Liverpool, England, Saturday morning. From there they will go to their former home, Cwmfwodore, Monmoukishire, South Wales. It was in this city that Mr. and Mrs. Jones both spent their childhood days and from which they have been absent for more than 32 years. It was at this city that the first iron mill in the world was built, and here the first ore was mined and made into pig iron. This was in the reign of Elizabeth and from that time the industry grew until in Mr. Jones' boyhood days it is said the mills were within a stone's throw of each other through the entire length of Wales.

The first mill was erected by Richard Hanbury, whose descendants still reside at Cwmfwodore. Mr. and Mrs. Jones will also visit relatives and friends at many other cities in Wales. They will also visit London and other large cities of England. Their trip will extend over three months.

LOREE HEAD OF B. & O.

President Cowen Resigned His Position, but Is a Director and Counsel.

New York, May 30.—At the meeting of the board of directors of the Baltimore and Ohio Railway company John K. Cowen tendered his resignation as president of the company, to take effect June 1, and L. F. Loree, now fourth vice president of the Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburg, was elected as Mr. Cowen's successor.

Mr. Loree, it is understood, will appoint George L. Potter, now general manager of the Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburg, to the same position in the Baltimore and Ohio.

The Pennsylvania interests, while desiring to have a man of their own training at the head of the active management of the company, have been most desirous of availing of Mr. Cowen's knowledge of Baltimore and Ohio affairs. Accordingly he has been elected to the directory, Mr. Rea, of the Pennsylvania, withdrawing therefrom, and has been elected general counsel, succeeding the New York firm of Guthrie, Cravath & Henderson, that firm being retained as special counsel.

Mr. Cowen, on being asked what the changes meant, replied he thought the action of the board spoke for itself. He had resigned the presidency and would continue as general counsel of the company. It is understood Mr. Cowen is also to act as consulting counsel for the Pennsylvania system.

Hale, Boston; Judge Alden Cheser, Dr. Josiah Strong, Everett F. Wheeler, Judge John I. Gilbert, Prof. John B. Clark and John F. Anderson, New York, and Oscar Lapham, Rhode Island.

The chairman's introductory address was an exhaustive resume of what had been accomplished in the cause of arbitration, and an earnest plea that as nations were now in favor of settling disputes without war those present should offer suggestions of a practical character for such settlements.

Just The Blues.

Many a woman dresses to go out, feels irresolute, sits down, and falls into a fit of despondent musing. Ask her what's the matter, and she'll probably answer "Just the blues." And what are the blues? Only another name, in general, for a disordered liver and a diseased stomach. Cleanse the liver, heal the stomach, purify the blood, and there'll be no more blues. It can be done by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This medicine puts the diseased organs of digestion and nutrition into a condition of sound health. It eliminates from the blood all impure and poisonous substances, and cleanses the clogged liver. It contains neither alcohol nor narcotics.

"I had liver complaint for the past fifteen years, complicated with dyspepsia and gall stones," writes Mrs. N. Bernier, of 461 Elm St., Oshkosh, Wis. "I doctored with seven of our prominent doctors, and not one or all of them have done me the good, nor begun to do what your medicines have. I have used three bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, one vial of his 'Pleasant Pellets, and one bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and have gained about eighteen pounds since I first began to take these remedies."

Lieutenant Townley, in his testimony, admitted that he asked a contracting firm to contribute to Captain Reed (formerly depot commissary at Manila) $2,000 and a percentage on future business toward covering Major Davis' shortage. The defense was that the motive was purely to shield a brother officer.

His figures show that 35 of the bodies removed were those of persons included in the list of the "desecrated" dead. Following are the names:

Sarah Hill, Harry Hill, Charlie Sebring, Mary Johnson, Elizabeth Boyce, Emma M. Croxall, William W. Devers, Mary Devers, D. C. Moore, Stephen Kent, Thomas Croxall, Hester Ann Knowles, Zillah Harker, Mary J. Morley, Ohio J. Smith, Mollie George, William Harvey, Margaret Brawdy, Thos. D. Blackmore, Elizabeth Blackmore, Harriet Blythe, Stanton Blythe, Josiah R. Gardner, Elijah Merchant, James Foster, M. H. Foutts, Flora Foutts, Lida R. Foutts, William Till, Caleb Till, Charles M. Thompson, Rosanna B. Farmer, May B. Farmer, Susan Colclough and Eliza Knowles.

In addition to the above list there have been perhaps as many more bodies removed from the old graveyard to the Spring Grove cemetery as to Riverview, and dozens of graves were made in the Catholic cemetery which contain the remains of those who were first laid to rest in the old burying ground.

It is asserted by many persons that of the 134 names of the dead alleged to be buried in the old cemetery not more than one-third of the bodies remain there at present.

TOOK FRENCH LEAVE

The Fire Station Boys' Pet No Longer Dwells With Them.

The boys at the fire station now mourn the loss of one of their pets. When Fred Martin returned from the Philippines he brought with him an animal plentiful at the islands and known as a mongrel, which he presented to the boys. They fixed up a cage for it and named it "Wallace." It has been a great attraction, large numbers calling at the station every day to see it, and it is supposed someone left the door of the cage open Tuesday night, and Wallace, not being overjoyed at his confinement, took French leave, and has not since been seen.

GOING TO WALES

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Jones, of the West End to Sail Tomorrow.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Jones, of the West End, will leave tomorrow morning for New York, whence they will sail on the Lucania for Liverpool, England, Saturday morning. From there they will go to their former home, Cwmfwodore, Monmoukishire, South Wales. It was in this city that Mr. and Mrs. Jones both spent their childhood days and from which they have been absent for more than 32 years. It was at this city that the first iron mill in the world was built, and here the first ore was mined and made into pig iron. This was in the reign of Elizabeth and from that time the industry grew until in Mr. Jones' boyhood days it is said the mills were within a stone's throw of each other through the entire length of Wales.

The first mill was erected by Richard Hanbury, whose descendants still reside at Cwmfwodore. Mr. and Mrs. Jones will also visit relatives and friends at many other cities in Wales. They will also visit London and other large cities of England. Their trip will extend over three months.

LOREE HEAD OF B. & O.

President Cowen Resigned His Position, but Is a Director and Counsel.

New York, May 30.—At the meeting of the board of directors of the Baltimore and Ohio Railway company John K. Cowen tendered his resignation as president of the company, to take effect June 1, and L. F. Loree, now fourth vice president of the Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburg, was elected as Mr. Cowen's successor.

Mr. Loree, it is understood, will appoint George L. Potter, now general manager of the Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburg, to the same position in the Baltimore and Ohio.

The Pennsylvania interests, while desiring to have a man of their own training at the head of the active management of the company, have been most desirous of availing of Mr. Cowen's knowledge of Baltimore and Ohio affairs. Accordingly he has been elected to the directory, Mr. Rea, of the Pennsylvania, withdrawing therefrom, and has been elected general counsel, succeeding the New York firm of Guthrie, Cravath & Henderson, that firm being retained as special counsel.

Mr. Cowen, on being asked what the changes meant, replied he thought the action of the board spoke for itself. He had resigned the presidency and would continue as general counsel of the company. It is understood Mr. Cowen is also to act as consulting counsel for the Pennsylvania system.

PRACTICAL ARBITRATION.

Lake Mohonk Conference Urged to Suggest Plans.

Lake Mohonk, N. Y., May 30.—The seventh annual Lake Mohonk conference on international arbitration was begun here. More than 200 delegates, representing many sections of the country, were present. Albert K. Smiley, the founder of these yearly conventions, delivered addresses of welcome.

J. H. Stiness, chief justice of the supreme court of Rhode Island, was elected chairman. Clinton Rogers Woodruff, of Philadelphia, and W. J. Rope, of Boston, were named secretaries, and Alexander C. Wood, treasurer.

The executive committee consists of John B. Garrett, Philadelphia; W. J. Coombs, Brooklyn; Robert Treat Paine, Benjamin T. Trueblood and Edward E. Hale, Boston; Judge Alden Cheser, Dr. Josiah Strong, Everett F. Wheeler, Judge John I. Gilbert, Prof. John B. Clark and John F. Anderson, New York, and Oscar Lapham, Rhode Island.

The chairman's introductory address was an exhaustive resume of what had been accomplished in the cause of arbitration, and an earnest plea that as nations were now in favor of settling disputes without war those present should offer suggestions of a practical character for such settlements.

Burglars Blew Up a Safe In an Ohio Town—Got Away With $10,000.

Fostoria, O., May 30.—Bradner branch of the Mechanics' bank, of this city, was wrecked and $4,000 stolen. Two charges of high explosives were used by the robbers, the first blowing the outer door off the vault and the second opening the strong box.

Watchman Denny fired two shots at the robbers as they left the bank, but they escaped safely on a Hocking Valley hand car. The entire glass front of the bank building was blown out and the walls were cracked. Burglar insurance fully covers the loss.

Just The Blues.

Many a woman dresses to go out, feels irresolute, sits down, and falls into a fit of despondent musing. Ask her what's the matter, and she'll probably answer "Just the blues." And what are the blues? Only another name, in general, for a disordered liver and a diseased stomach. Cleanse the liver, heal the stomach, purify the blood, and there'll be no more blues. It can be done by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This medicine puts the diseased organs of digestion and nutrition into a condition of sound health. It eliminates from the blood all impure and poisonous substances, and cleanses the clogged liver. It contains neither alcohol nor narcotics.

"I had liver complaint for the past fifteen years, complicated with dyspepsia and gall stones," writes Mrs. N. Bernier, of 461 Elm St., Oshkosh, Wis. "I doctored with seven of our prominent doctors, and not one or all of them have done me the good, nor begun to do what your medicines have. I have used three bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, one vial of his 'Pleasant Pellets, and one bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and have gained about eighteen pounds since I first began to take these remedies."

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure biliousness.

A SERGEANT SENTENCED.

Court Martial of Lieut. Townley Commenced at Cavite.

Manila, May 30.—Commissary Sergeant Henry Wilson has been sentenced to three years' imprisonment in Bilibid prison for stealing supplies.

It is settled that the governing board of Manila is to consist of an army officer, a Filipino and an American civilian.

Major Batson is negotiating with the emissaries of General Cailles at Santa Cruz.

Lieutenant Townley, in his testimony, admitted that he asked a contracting firm to contribute to Captain Reed (formerly depot commissary at Manila) $2,000 and a percentage on future business toward covering Major Davis' shortage. The defense was that the motive was purely to shield a brother officer.

SECOND APPEARANCE OF SMALLPOX AT HOMEWORTH

Homeworth, May 30.—(Special)—Great excitement prevails here as the result of the discovery of a second case of smallpox in the family of Joseph Klopfenstein.

Several weeks ago Mrs. Klopfenstein was visiting in Cleveland and contracted the disease there. She came home and the house was quarantined until it was thought she had fully recovered and all danger from contagion removed. Last week a daughter was attacked by the malady and is now in a very serious condition. Two physicians are in attendance.

There is great danger of the disease gaining a foothold, as after the quarantine was removed and until the daughter was confined to her bed the family had circulated through the community, unconscious of the danger they had lurking with them. Grave fears prevail that other cases will develop.

MEMORIAL DAY.

The greatest Memorial day oration ever delivered was Lincoln's Gettysburg speech. It cannot be read too often by American patriots. We therefore reproduce it as the most appropriate sentiment of the day:

"Fourscore and seven years ago our fathers brought forth upon this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal. Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting place for those who gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But in a large sense we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it far above our power to add or detract.

"The world will little note, nor long remember, what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us, the living, rather to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us, that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion; that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain; that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, and for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

COMMANDER TAGGART'S ZEAL.

Department Commander E. F. Taggart, of Akron, has not been in office very long, but he has attracted considerable attention in his brief management of the affairs of the G. A. R. in this section of Ohio. On Tuesday he sent the following telegram to the mayor of Lancaster in regard to a proposed Memorial day athletic contest which the school boys of that town propose to hold:

"If the citizens of Lancaster allow the desecration of Memorial day by permitting their high school to hold 'a field day' carnival, your people are not deserving of entertaining our next encampment. The department commander enters the united protest of the Grand Army of Ohio against all such desecration on this most holy day."

The school boys were visited by the mayor of Lancaster and readily agreed to postpone their field day. They had meant no discourtesy to the G. A. R. and had chosen May 30 for their sports merely because the day was a holiday. It is probable that much of the alleged desecration of the day sacred to the memory of American patriots comes from similar thoughtlessness. Commander Taggart's zeal will doubtless be commended by his comrades. Still, there are worse ways of observing Decoration day than by engaging in manly sports.

McLEAN THE VICTOR.

The state convention of the Democracy is to be held in Columbus in July. This was settled at the meeting this week of the state central committee of the party. The decision seems to indicate that John R. McLean and no one else is boss. Tom L. Johnson, of Cleveland, wanted the convention held in the Forest City. McLean decreed otherwise and his order was obeyed. As a crumb of comfort Cuyhoga county was given the temporary chairmanship of the convention. The result is taken to indicate that McLean controls the state central committee and will control the convention and that Col. Kilbourne will be the Democratic nominee for governor. Republicans will be satisfied, though Democracy will not. Kilbourne will be defeated with ease and dispatch.

Some political observers are now predicting that both Tillman and McLaurin, of South Carolina, will lose their senatorial seats, the citizens taking the ground that the fight is the senators' and not theirs. Southerners evidently don't think a personal quarrel that is not settled at the pistols' point is settled as tradition and "honah" demand.

GLEANINGS OF A DAY

THE LOCAL POTTERIES

A. J. Britton met with a painful accident yesterday afternoon while at work at the Thomas knob works. He was engaged at drawing kiln and had an arm full of insulating wire which he proposed throwing into a box. His thumb and first finger of his left hand were caught by the falling wire and were badly lacerated. The wounds bled profusely and after the flow of blood was stopped he went to the office of a physician where the wounds were dressed. He will be unable to work for several days.

Eugene Swaney, employed at the E. M. Knowles pottery, had a narrow escape from being injured while at work yesterday afternoon. He had finished for the day and after sweeping up the scraps and putting them in a box started out to throw them over the bank. As he passed out of the door a loose brick fell, and just missing his head lit in the box. Swaney was badly frightened, thinking that some one had thrown the brick at him.

Two young boys employed at the Sevres China company engaged in a fight after they were through work Tuesday evening. The boys were joking with each other and it was claimed that one of them got mad and struck the other in the face several times, and he is now wearing a black eye.

It is announced on apparently good authority, that the Chelsea white ware pottery, of New Cumberland, will be put in full operation within the next two weeks. A force will be put on to repair the plant at once.

Claude Hendricks, a jiggerman at the Thompson pottery, is off duty threatened with an attack of fever. His place is filled by his brother, Harry Hendricks.

The Cleveland & Pittsburg yesterday placed a force of men at work tearing out the old switch at the Laughlin No. 1 pottery and placing in a new one.

F. Massey left this morning for Ford City where he has taken a job as rish maker in the pottery at that place. He was formerly employed at Murphy's.

J. W. Clark left yesterday morning for Anderson, Ind., where he will be employed for several weeks erecting new kilns for the Encaustic Tile company.

The contract has been let for the tearing down of one and the erection of three new kilns at the Union and work will be started the first of next week.

A carload of machinery to be used at the new pottery being erected at Sebring by Sebring Bros. was loaded and shipped to Sebring today.

The printers and fillers-in at the Sevres China company were compelled to loaf yesterday, there being a shortage of ware.

William H. Baker, who has been employed as a dishmaker at Sebring, has taken a dish job at the Murphy plant.

Thomas Farmer has accepted a position at the Dresden pottery working on the big jigger.

Samuel Wilgues has accepted a position making handles at the East Liverpool pottery.

B. Miller has accepted a position as presser at Laughlin No. 1.

George Freymark has taken a job as presser at the Union.

The first glost giln was fired at the Union last night.

NOTICE TO POTTERS.

On and after July 1 we wish to conduct a strictly union Brotherhood factory at Western Uniform scale of wages; we will want journeymen jiggermen, pressers, dippers, kilnhands, printers, saggermakers, packers and coopers; we will also need experienced fillers-in, gilders, decalcomania works, etc.; we, therefore, prefer married men for the above situations who have girls or boys that are accustomed to working at any of the above branches throughout the pottery; we can give steady work and desire only people steady in their habits. Send all applications direct to Ford China Co., Ford City, Pa., and for any additional information apply to A. S. Hughes or T. J. Duffy, of East Liverpool, O. 292-s

Urinary troubles, diabetes, surely follow.

Doan's Kidney Pills relieve backache,

East Liverpool citizens endorse them.

Mr. Thomas Laughlin, of 172 Sophia street, engineer, says: "I caught cold and neglected it. It settled in my back and kidneys and forced me to quit work and almost cost me my life. I could not move without suffering, and often could neither sit, stand or lie for pain. The secretions of the kidneys went wrong and distressed and annoyed me both night and day. I took medicines for two years, but did not get well. When I read of Doan's Kidney Pills I got a box at the W. & W. pharmacy. Noticing some improvement by the time I had taken the first half of the box, I continued until I had taken four boxes and my back was all right, as well as the urinary trouble. I will substantiate my statement of Doan Kidney Pills if any one will come to my house to investigate for themselves. My wife had some backache; she took Doan's Kidney Pills and was cured."

MAN AND RIG MISSING

Well Dressed Stranger Victimizes a Livery Stable Keeper In Steubenville.

Steubenville, May 30.—Last Wednesday a stranger went to the livery stable of George Smith, on South Fifth street, and representing that he was an agent for the McCormick reaper and mower manufactory of Chicago, hired a horse and buggy to drive through the country, saying he would return on Saturday. He has not returned.

Fatal Brevity.

There is a little settlement of New Hampshire people in Kiowa county, Colo. Among other things they brought with them the New Hampshire aversion to using any more words in conversation than are absolutely necessary. Two of them met on the road recently and indulged in the following dialogue:

"Mornin, Si."

"Mornin, Josh."

"Turpentine."

"Mornin."

"Mornin."

A few days later the men met again, and here's the way a hard luck story was told in mighty few words:

"Mornin, Si!"

"Mornin, Josh!"

"What'd you say you gave your horse for bots?"

"Turpentine."

"Killed mine."

"Mine too."

"Mornin!"

"Mornin!"

NEGLECTED GRAVES

CANNOT BE SO BADLY NEGLECTED AFTER ALL.

Bodies Long Since Removed From the Old Graveyard to New Burial Places.

The report concerning the "forsaken dead" in the old Fifth street cemetery is denounced on every hand as a batch of misstatements. At the request of relatives of the departed ones whose graves are alleged to be shamefully neglected, J. M. Kelly has compiled a list of those whose bodies have been removed to Riverview cemetery. His figures show that 35 of the bodies removed were those of persons included in the list of the "desecrated" dead. Following are the names:

Sarah Hill, Harry Hill, Charlie Sebring, Mary Johnson, Elizabeth Boyce, Emma M. Croxall, William W. Devers, Mary Devers, D. C. Moore, Stephen Kent, Thomas Croxall, Hester Ann Knowles, Zillah Harker, Mary J. Morley, Ohio J. Smith, Mollie George, William Harvey, Margaret Brawdy, Thos. D. Blackmore, Elizabeth Blackmore, Harriet Blythe, Stanton Blythe, Josiah R. Gardner, Elijah Merchant, James Foster, M. H. Foutts, Flora Foutts, Lida R. Foutts, William Till, Caleb Till, Charles M. Thompson, Rosanna B. Farmer, May B. Farmer, Susan Colclough and Eliza Knowles.

In addition to the above list there have been perhaps as many more bodies removed from the old graveyard to the Spring Grove cemetery as to Riverview, and dozens of graves were made in the Catholic cemetery which contain the remains of those who were first laid to rest in the old burying ground.

It is asserted by many persons that of the 134 names of the dead alleged to be buried in the old cemetery not more than one-third of the bodies remain there at present.

TOOK FRENCH LEAVE

The Fire Station Boys' Pet No Longer Dwells With Them.

The boys at the fire station now mourn the loss of one of their pets. When Fred Martin returned from the Philippines he brought with him an animal plentiful at the islands and known as a mongrel, which he presented to the boys. They fixed up a cage for it and named it "Wallace." It has been a great attraction, large numbers calling at the station every day to see it, and it is supposed someone left the door of the cage open Tuesday night, and Wallace, not being overjoyed at his confinement, took French leave, and has not since been seen.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Jones, of the West End to Sail Tomorrow.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Jones, of the West End, will leave tomorrow morning for New York, whence they will sail on the Lucania for Liverpool, England, Saturday morning. From there they will go to their former home, Cwmfwodore, Monmoukishire, South Wales. It was in this city that Mr. and Mrs. Jones both spent their childhood days and from which they have been absent for more than 32 years. It was at this city that the first iron mill in the world was built, and here the first ore was mined and made into pig iron. This was in the reign of Elizabeth and from that time the industry grew until in Mr. Jones' boyhood days it is said the mills were within a stone's throw of each other through the entire length of Wales.

The first mill was erected by Richard Hanbury, whose descendants still reside at Cwmfwodore. Mr. and Mrs. Jones will also visit relatives and friends at many other cities in Wales. They will also visit London and other large cities of England. Their trip will extend over three months.

LOREE HEAD OF B. & O.

President Cowen Resigned His Position, but Is a Director and Counsel.

New York, May 30.—At the meeting of the board of directors of the Baltimore and Ohio Railway company John K. Cowen tendered his resignation as president of the company, to take effect June 1, and L. F. Loree, now fourth vice president of the Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburg, was elected as Mr. Cowen's successor.

Mr. Loree, it is understood, will appoint George L. Potter, now general manager of the Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburg, to the same position in the Baltimore and Ohio.

The Pennsylvania interests, while desiring to have a man of their own training at the head of the active management of the company, have been most desirous of availing of Mr. Cowen's knowledge of Baltimore and Ohio affairs. Accordingly he has been elected to the directory, Mr. Rea, of the Pennsylvania, withdrawing therefrom, and has been elected general counsel, succeeding the New York firm of Guthrie, Cravath & Henderson, that firm being retained as special counsel.

Mr. Cowen, on being asked what the changes meant, replied he thought the action of the board spoke for itself. He had resigned the presidency and would continue as general counsel of the company. It is understood Mr. Cowen is also to act as consulting counsel for the Pennsylvania system.

PRACTICAL ARBITRATION.

Lake Mohonk Conference Urged to Suggest Plans.

Lake Mohonk, N. Y., May 30.—The seventh annual Lake Mohonk conference on international arbitration was begun here. More than 200 delegates, representing many sections of the country, were present. Albert K. Smiley, the founder of these yearly conventions, delivered addresses of welcome.

J. H. Stiness, chief justice of the supreme court of Rhode Island, was elected chairman. Clinton Rogers Woodruff, of Philadelphia, and W. J. Rope, of Boston, were named secretaries, and Alexander C. Wood, treasurer.

The executive committee consists of John B. Garrett, Philadelphia; W. J. Coombs, Brooklyn; Robert Treat Paine, Benjamin T. Trueblood and Edward E. Hale, Boston; Judge Alden Cheser, Dr. Josiah Strong, Everett F. Wheeler, Judge John I. Gilbert, Prof. John B. Clark and John F. Anderson, New York, and Oscar Lapham, Rhode Island.

The chairman's introductory address was an exhaustive resume of what had been accomplished in the cause of arbitration, and an earnest plea that as nations were now in favor of settling disputes without war those present should offer suggestions of a practical character for such settlements.

Burglars Blew Up a Safe In an Ohio Town—Got Away With $10,000.

Fostoria, O., May 30.—Bradner branch of the Mechanics' bank, of this city, was wrecked and $4,000 stolen. Two charges of high explosives were used by the robbers, the first blowing the outer door off the vault and the second opening the strong box.

Watchman Denny fired two shots at the robbers as they left the bank, but they escaped safely on a Hocking Valley hand car. The entire glass front of the bank building was blown out and the walls were cracked. Burglar insurance fully covers the loss.

Just The Blues.

Many a woman dresses to go out, feels irresolute, sits down, and falls into a fit of despondent musing. Ask her what's the matter, and she'll probably answer "Just the blues." And what are the blues? Only another name, in general, for a disordered liver and a diseased stomach. Cleanse the liver, heal the stomach, purify the blood, and there'll be no more blues. It can be done by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This medicine puts the diseased organs of digestion and nutrition into a condition of sound health. It eliminates from the blood all impure and poisonous substances, and cleanses the clogged liver. It contains neither alcohol nor narcotics.

"I had liver complaint for the past fifteen years, complicated with dyspepsia and gall stones," writes Mrs. N. Bernier, of 461 Elm St., Oshkosh, Wis. "I doctored with seven of our prominent doctors, and not one or all of them have done me the good, nor begun to do what your medicines have. I have used three bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, one vial of his 'Pleasant Pellets, and one bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and have gained about eighteen pounds since I first began to take these remedies."

A SERGEANT SENTENCED.

Court Martial of Lieut. Townley Commenced at Cavite.

Manila, May 30.—Commissary Sergeant Henry Wilson has been sentenced to three years' imprisonment in Bilibid prison for stealing supplies.

The trial of Harold M. Pitt, manager of Evans & Co., charged with improperly purchasing government stores, has been postponed.

The court martial of Lieutenant Richard H. Townley for alleged participation in the commissary frauds at Manila, began at Cavite.

It is settled that the governing board of Manila is to consist of an army officer, a Filipino and an American civilian.

Major Batson is negotiating with the emissaries of General Cailles at Santa Cruz.

Lieutenant Townley, in his testimony, admitted that he asked a contracting firm to contribute to Captain Reed (formerly depot commissary at Manila) $2,000 and a percentage on future business toward covering Major Davis' shortage. The defense was that the motive was purely to shield a brother officer.

In addition to the above list there have been perhaps as many more bodies removed from the old graveyard to the Spring Grove cemetery as to Riverview, and dozens of graves were made in the Catholic cemetery which contain the remains of those who were first laid to rest in the old burying ground.

It is asserted by many persons that of the 134 names of the dead alleged to be buried in the old cemetery not more than one-third of the bodies remain there at present.

TOOK FRENCH LEAVE

The Fire Station Boys' Pet No Longer Dwells With Them.

The boys at the fire station now mourn the loss of one of their pets. When Fred Martin returned from the Philippines he brought with him an animal plentiful at the islands and known as a mongrel, which he presented to the boys. They fixed up a cage for it and named it "Wallace." It has been a great attraction, large numbers calling at the station every day to see it, and it is supposed someone left the door of the cage open Tuesday night, and Wallace, not being overjoyed at his confinement, took French leave, and has not since been seen.

GOING TO WALES

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Jones, of the West End to Sail Tomorrow.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Jones, of the West End, will leave tomorrow morning for New York, whence they will sail on the Lucania for Liverpool, England, Saturday morning. From there they will go to their former home, Cwmfwodore, Monmoukishire, South Wales. It was in this city that Mr. and Mrs. Jones both spent their childhood days and from which they have been absent for more than 32 years. It was at this city that the first iron mill in the world was built, and here the first ore was mined and made into pig iron. This was in the reign of Elizabeth and from that time the industry grew until in Mr. Jones' boyhood days it is said the mills were within a stone's throw of each other through the entire length of Wales.

The first mill was erected by Richard Hanbury, whose descendants still reside at Cwmfwodore. Mr. and Mrs. Jones will also visit relatives and friends at many other cities in Wales. They will also visit London and other large cities of England. Their trip will extend over three months.

LOREE HEAD OF B. & O.

President Cowen Resigned His Position, but Is a Director and Counsel.

New York, May 30.—At the meeting of the board of directors of the Baltimore and Ohio Railway company John K. Cowen tendered his resignation as president of the company, to take effect June 1, and L. F. Loree, now fourth vice president of the Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburg, was elected as Mr. Cowen's successor.

Mr. Loree, it is understood, will appoint George L. Potter, now general manager of the Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburg, to the same position in the Baltimore and Ohio.

The Pennsylvania interests, while desiring to have a man of their own training at the head of the active management of the company, have been most desirous of availing of Mr. Cowen's knowledge of Baltimore and Ohio affairs. Accordingly he has been elected to the directory, Mr. Rea, of the Pennsylvania, withdrawing therefrom, and has been elected general counsel, succeeding the New York firm of Guthrie, Cravath & Henderson, that firm being retained as special counsel.

Mr. Cowen, on being asked what the changes meant, replied he thought the action of the board spoke for itself. He had resigned the presidency and would continue as general counsel of the company. It is understood Mr. Cowen is also to act as consulting counsel for the Pennsylvania system.

The executive committee consists of John B. Garrett, Philadelphia; W. J. Coombs, Brooklyn; Robert Treat Paine, Benjamin T. Trueblood and Edward E. Hale, Boston; Judge Alden Cheser, Dr. Josiah Strong, Everett F. Wheeler, Judge John I. Gilbert, Prof. John B. Clark and John F. Anderson, New York, and Oscar Lapham, Rhode Island.

The chairman's introductory address was an exhaustive resume of what had been accomplished in the cause of arbitration, and an earnest plea that as nations were now in favor of settling disputes without war those present should offer suggestions of a practical character for such settlements.

Just The Blues.

Many a woman dresses to go out, feels irresolute, sits down, and falls into a fit of despondent musing. Ask her what's the matter, and she'll probably answer "Just the blues." And what are the blues? Only another name, in general, for a disordered liver and a diseased stomach. Cleanse the liver, heal the stomach, purify the blood, and there'll be no more blues. It can be done by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This medicine puts the diseased organs of digestion and nutrition into a condition of sound health. It eliminates from the blood all impure and poisonous substances, and cleanses the clogged liver. It contains neither alcohol nor narcotics.

"I had liver complaint for the past fifteen years, complicated with dyspepsia and gall stones," writes Mrs. N. Bernier, of 461 Elm St., Oshkosh, Wis. "I doctored with seven of our prominent doctors, and not one or all of them have done me the good, nor begun to do what your medicines have. I have used three bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, one vial of his 'Pleasant Pellets, and one bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and have gained about eighteen pounds since I first began to take these remedies."

Lieutenant Townley, in his testimony, admitted that he asked a contracting firm to contribute to Captain Reed (formerly depot commissary at Manila) $2,000 and a percentage on future business toward covering Major Davis' shortage. The defense was that the motive was purely to shield a brother officer.

Fearful Punishment For An Awful Crime, In Florida.

WHITE WOMAN NEGRO'S VICTIM.

Negroes Capture the Fugitive, For Whom Mad Crowd Searched, and Took Him to Jail—Mob Secured Fiend and Burned Him at Stake.

Bartow, Fla., May 30.—Fred Rochelle, a negro, 35 years of age, who criminally assaulted and then murdered Mrs. Rena Taggart, a well-known and respected white woman, of this city, was burned at the stake here.

Negro Assaulted His Victim.

Mrs. Taggart, who was born and reared in this place, and was a woman of good family and reputation, went fishing alone in a small row boat that she kept at the city bridge over Piaco creek. This is in full view of the public thoroughfare. A few minutes before noon, desiring to return home, she rowed her boat to the bridge and made it fast. A negro man was fishing from the bridge at the time. Mrs. Taggart started home and had proceeded only a few steps in the swamp toward the open prairie and thence to the street, when she was approached by Rochelle, who had been hiding in the swamp. He seized her and she broke loose, and, screaming, ran from the swamp into the prairie, where he overtook her.

Murdered Her After Assault.

After the assault, while she was prostrate, he held her with his hands and knees, and, taking his knife from his pocket, cut her throat from ear to ear, causing instant death. He then walked to the negro who had been fishing on the bridge and who was thoroughly frightened and asked him what he should do with the body. He was told to leave it where it was, but, unheedful of this request, he took the bleeding form in his arms and carried it back to the swamp, threw it down and escaped into the interior of the swamp. In a few minutes the crime had been reported and in less than an hour practically the entire city was in arms and a well-armed posse was moving in every direction in search of the criminal. Bloodhounds were secured and all night Tuesday a fruitless search was continued.

Negroes Captured Brute.

About noon Wednesday a courier arrived announcing that the negro had been captured by two other negroes about three miles south of the city. Posses were immediately on the trail, but the capturers evaded detection and succeeded in getting their prisoner quickly into the city and in turning him over to the sheriff of Polk county. In less than 10 minutes after the transfer had been made the streets became congested with people, and the crowd, augmented as it marched, moved on the jail. In spite of the sheriff and a strong guard of extra deputies, who made every effort to protect him from mob violence, they secured the prisoner and took up the march to the scene of the crime. He was half dragged, half carried to the bridge, enveloped by a great throng of people, who were resolute and determined, but quiet and orderly. Scream after scream broke from the wretch's quivering lips, followed by groans and prayers for mercy.

Burning at Stake the Penalty.

The stake was the only suggestion as to the proper expiation of the crime, and without organized effort, and yet with apparently unanimous understanding, a barrel was in readiness and was placed by the stake on the very spot where Mrs. Taggart was assaulted and murdered.

On this the negro was placed and chained to the stake. He pleaded for mercy, but in the great crowd around him silence was the only response. There were no jeers, no swearing, no disorder. Before the chains around his body had been made fast, cans of kerosene oil from many sources were passed to the front, and one of the leaders stepped to the negro and slowly but deliberately poured it upon him and his clothes until clothes and barrel were well saturated. It was then about 6 o'clock in the evening. The crowd was growing and business in the city had practically been suspended.

Match Was Applied.

When the match was applied the blaze quickly leaped skyward. The burning body could be seen only as a dark object in the circle of a roaring flame. Then the fire slackened and the writhing body came back in full view, but already the groans had ceased, and the only evidence of life was in the contortions of the muscles of the limbs. For about 15 minutes the body burned and in about a half hour from the time of the application of the match only the charred bones were left.

Close Resemblance.

Mrs. Talkso's husband was reading an advertisement which asserted that "the mail is quick, the telegrapher is quicker, but the telephone is quickest, and you don't have to wait for an answer."

"Ah," he reflected, "in one particular that reminds me strongly of Mrs. Talkso."—Baltimore American.

HOME AGAIN TODAY.

MRS. M'KINLEY REACHING LONG JOURNEY'S END.

Visit of Her Sister and Niece at Canton, Cheered Her—Ohioans Enthusiastic.

Washington, May 30.—The president and Mrs. McKinley are due here this morning.

Pittsburg, May 30.—The last of the day of the homeward journey of the presidential party was a ride across the president's native state of Ohio. Only four stops were made, the longest at Canton, the president's home town, where the train remained for 20 minutes to give Mrs. McKinley an opportunity to see her sister, Mrs. M. C. Barber, and her niece, Miss Ida Barber. Quite a number of the president's old friends and neighbors were at the station and they were overjoyed to learn from the president's own lips that Mrs. McKinley's improvement had continued slowly, but steadily. Judge Day, the former secretary of state; John C. Deuber, Judge Baldwin and Mayor Robertson came aboard the Olympia, but did not see Mrs. McKinley. Her sister was with her until the train left, and her neice remained aboard. The latter will go to Washington, and, with her sister, Miss Mary Barber, who accompanied the party to the Pacific coast, will be the guest of Mrs. McKinley at the white house until she is able to return to Canton.

Many of the stations along the line of the road through Ohio were decorated with American flags. At Lima, the first stop in the state, the school children were given a half holiday to permit them to go to the depot to see the president.

Mrs. McKinley had a very comfortable day. It had been raining in Ohio for several days and there was no dust or heat to make the journey oppressive. The brief visit with her sister at Canton seemed to brighten her spirits and doubtless did her much good. The train arrived at Pittsburg about 7:35 p. m.

CONSIDERABLE STRENGTH.

Additional Activity Noted In Market Wednesday—Profit Taking In Some Stocks.

New York, May 30.—There was additional activity in the market Wednesday and considerable strength and variety, but the dealings were still evidently in large part professional and the points of strength were somewhat scattered. It was noticeable also that profit taking was going on in stocks which have recently advanced under cover of the new points of strength. Thus, while Atchison, Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific and the Southern railway stocks were moving upward Wednesday, the Tobacco stocks, Lackawanna, the Wabash stocks, Erie and American Car were held back, although much less active than during the time of their recent advance. The strength shown during the day seemed to be largely due to special causes, but the favorable progress made in the London stock exchange settlement and the hope that its completion will clear the way for a growth of confidence was a favoring factor. Something was made of the absence of Northern Pacific convertible bonds, as indicating a prospect of a settlement of the Northern Pacific dispute.

Union Pacific stock did not move decisively, although it recovered well from a period of weakness without holding the entire recovery. April net earnings were an element in the strength of a number of stocks, and were supplemented by other explanations, posibly to further a speculative movement. Atchison's statement, published previously, was a continuing influence. The advance in Pennsylvania was made to appear in sympathy with a revival of the old rumors of a union in retaliation for the project of a Wabash trunk line outlet. The halt in the upward movement of Wabash and Lackawanna may have been significant in the same connection. Southern Pacific presented a very strong statement of net earnings, and Southern railway, Union Pacific and St. Louis and San Francisco also made good showings for April. There were, besides, rumors that announcement would soon be made of large Pennsylvania holdings in Southern railway and that the Chicago, Indianapolis and Louisville has passed to the control of the Southern railway. Reports were current that Union Pacific was extending its holdings of Southern Pacific so as to secure absolute control. The extra dividend on Minneapolis and St. Louis accounts for the strength of that stock. Pacific Mail's rise was in sympathy with Southern Pacific. The rise in Denver and Rio Grande was unexplained. The unfavorable features of the government's weekly crop report and the unexpectedly large gold exports were ignored. Gold engagements ran up at one time to $4,650,000. They were later reduced to $3,950,000 to comply with insurance requirements.

There was some irregularity in the bond market on a fair volume of dealings. Total sales, par value, $2,775,000.

Suit Against Mrs. Eddy.

Boston, May 30.—The jury trial of the suit of Mrs. Josephine A. Woodbury, of this city, claiming $150,000 damages from Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, of Concord, N. H., founder of the Christian Scientist sect, for libel, was begun in the Suffolk county superior court here.

The Resin Eaters.

"Resin eating," said a south Georgia doctor, "is a habit acquired by the Cracker settlers who live in the neighborhood of a turpentine still. The resin they use isn't the hard, shiny resin of commerce, but has been dipped out of the cooking caldron at an early stage of the process, and when it cools it can be kneaded between the fingers like wax. The backwoods resin eater will bite off an immense chunk and chew it placidly until it disappears. The heat of the mouth keeps it fairly soft, but if the chewing becomes too deliberate it is apt to 'set,' as they say, and cement the victim's jaws together in a grip of iron.

"On one occasion a big, rawboned backwoodsman who used to hang around a still I operated came rushing into my little office, clutching his face in both hands and making a horrible gurgling noise in his throat. 'What on earth is the matter?' I asked in alarm. 'His rosum's sot,' said another Cracker, who brought up the rear. I was nonplused at first, but finally grasped the fact that the man had been chewing a monstrous slab of resin and had thoughtlessly suspended operations long enough to allow it to solidify and clamp his teeth like a vice. We finally pried his mouth open with a chisel and broke a couple of molars in the operation. Next day I saw him chewing again."—Exchange.

The Torture of a Flax Shirt.

The most trying ordeal that Booker T. Washington was forced to endure as a slave boy was the wearing of a flax shirt. In his autobiography, "Up From Slavery," he says:

"In the portion of Virginia where I lived it was common to use flax as part of the clothing for slaves. That part of the flax from which our clothing was made was largely the refuse, which of course was the cheapest and roughest part. I can scarcely imagine any torture except perhaps the pulling of a tooth that is equal to that caused by pulling on a new flax shirt for the first time. It is almost equal to the feeling that one would experience if he had a dozen or more chestnut burs or a hundred small pin points in contact with the flesh. Even to this day I can recall accurately the tortures that I underwent when pulling on one of these garments. The fact that my flesh was soft and tender added to the pain. But I had no choice. I had to wear the flax shirt or none, and had it been left to me to choose I should have chosen to wear no covering.

"In connection with the flax shirt my brother John, who is several years older than I am, performed one of the most generous acts that I ever heard of one slave relative doing for another. On several occasions when I was being forced to wear a new flax shirt he generously agreed to put it on in my stead and wear it for several days till it was 'broken in.' Until I had grown to be quite a youth this single garment was all that I wore."

SECOND APPEARANCE OF SMALLPOX AT HOMEWORTH

Homeworth, May 30.—(Special)—Great excitement prevails here as the result of the discovery of a second case of smallpox in the family of Joseph Klopfenstein.

Several weeks ago Mrs. Klopfenstein was visiting in Cleveland and contracted the disease there. She came home and the house was quarantined until it was thought she had fully recovered and all danger from contagion removed. Last week a daughter was attacked by the malady and is now in a very serious condition. Two physicians are in attendance.

There is great danger of the disease gaining a foothold, as after the quarantine was removed and until the daughter was confined to her bed the family had circulated through the community, unconscious of the danger they had lurking with them. Grave fears prevail that other cases will develop.

A GENERATION AFTER;

Or,

A Luzon Memorial Day.

By Joseph A. Altsheler.

Copyright, 1901, by Joseph A. Altsheler.

THE third soldier on the left was gray and old. His hair was short and thin, and his face was seamed by a thousand little wrinkles, crossing each other in a fine network. But there was nothing decrepit about his figure, which was spare, nervous and strong like that of an athlete. Even when he lay at rest his muscles were drawn and ready like those of a panther about to spring. He wore a faded uniform, and every line and angle about him marked the American regular soldier, alert and self reliant.

On their right lay a little village of huts, now lone and deserted, and from the dense tropical jungle on their left came the sound of the enemy's trumpet. The old soldier turned a little farther over on his side and, taking from his pocket a twist of tobacco, cut off a piece with his clasp knife and offered it to the young man beside him. When the youth declined it, the regular shook his head gravely and said:

"You make a mistake, Jarvis. Tobacco is good for a soldier's nerves, and when he can't get anything to eat it's a wonderful sustainer of strength."

Then he put the piece in his own mouth and chewed with great composure and satisfaction.

The note of the trumpet, faint and far, came again, but the regular took no notice until the youth shifted restlessly and attempted to peer over a clump of thorn bushes in the direction of the sound. Then he laid two strong hands upon his comrade's blouse and quietly pulled him down.

"Don't do that," he said without anger, "because a Mauser bullet might come along, and then Private Jarvis of the Fourth infantry would need no more rations. You see, it wouldn't be fair to the government, which has fed you and clothed and paid you to waste your life in such a manner."

"I don't like this sort of war," said Private Jarvis impatiently. "Half the time I'm floundering in a thorn bush, and the other half I'm in the black mud of a swamp up to my waist, while the enemy is sneaking through the bushes with his Mauser ready to pot us."

"That's so," replied the regular. "War ain't a picnic anywhere, least of all here, where it's so hot and you've got to find the enemy and then catch him and hold him before you can lick him. Now, it was hot down there in Cuba when we went up the hill at San Juan, with the Spaniards blazing away at us like mad, but the Spaniard when he got his licking took it and quit, and then we became good friends. Now, here"—

He stopped suddenly. They heard far off in the jungle the sound of a crackling rifle fire.

"It's our skirmishers driving the enemy back on his earthworks," said the regular. "They're clearing the bush—doing the light work. The heavy job's got to wait, and we're not wanted yet. It's slow work, this lying here in the sun. I wonder what they are doing back in the States."

The boy Jarvis was silent for a moment, and then his eyes gleamed.

"I know what they are doing—at least in my part of the country," he said. "Don't you know what day this is, Wilson?"

The regular shook his head.

"How do you expect a fellow to keep track of time," he said, "when for days and days he's been following the little brown men in a Luzon jungle? We don't have a chance to rest and sleep, much less trying to think what day of the week it is."

"But I remember," said Jarvis. "It's the 30th of May, and it's Decoration day, the day when we remember those who fell in the civil war. Say, Wilson, over there in my home, way up in old York state by Lake Ontario, all the women are out today putting flowers on the graves of the old soldiers. The pretty girls are along, too, God bless 'em! I can see their blue eyes and brown hair and red cheeks now. It isn't so sad, you know; that war was such a long time ago that all the sting of it has passed. It was fought before I was born, and we just feel that they were all heroes together. We glory in 'em, and the grief is gone. You know how it is, Wilson?"

"Yes, I know how it is," replied the regular.

There was a sudden increase in the firing of the skirmishers and Wilson appeared to be listening intently, but his thoughts were far away and in a time long past. His face was too brown and seamed to show emotion, but there was a faint suspicion of a mist in his eyes.

"Yes, I know how it is, Jarvis," he repeated, "but you see I was on the other side, and I ain't got any cause to be ashamed of it. We thought we were right and your people thought they were right, and with only that little difference of opinion between us we made the grandest fight of it the world has ever seen. Well, it was over long ago, and those that were in it ain't got any bitter feeling toward each other. It's right that the northern people should decorate the graves of the men who fell, and in the south we do the same. Hark to that trumpet! They are still gathering. They know that we'll charge 'em pretty quick. Just as soon as our skirmishers and cavalry turn their left flank, it'll be up and at 'em."

Soft, but mellow and clear, the note of the trumpet once more came through the jungle across the marsh. The fire of the skirmishers swelled into a steady crackle.

"That trumpet is a signal," said the regular, "and it's like another but bigger signal that I heard a long time ago. Hear those shots over there? The cavalry are on their flanks now. We haven't got much longer to wait; then we'll swing forward as we did that day up Cemetery hill, but to a luckier end."

"It was hot then?" said the youth tentatively.

The regular laughed quietly.

"Hot?" he said. "Hot was no name for it. It was the road to the infernal regions. I'm a Virginian, Jarvis, and I was with Pickett. I was no older then than you are now. We were lying down on Seminary ridge, facing the Yankees on Cemetery hill and biding our time. We had been fighting there nearly three days, you know, Jarvis, but we, under Pickett, did not come up until the last day. Do you see any of 'em, Jarvis?"

"No. The skirmishers are still lively, but I don't see anything."

"It's still too early for us. There had been a tremendous fire of big guns, about 300 of 'em altogether, for an hour or two, and then they stopped all of a sudden. It was so still that you could hear an ant crawl. Then came the signal for us with Pickett to charge home to the heart of the northern army, and we did it. I say we did it, but we didn't come back—at least not many of us. It was about a mile across the open, and there were less than 5,000 of us going against the Yankee army of 60,000 or 80,000 men, though if it had been the other way I guess the Yankees would have done the same. That was the hottest and liveliest march, Jarvis, that 5,000 men ever made. They began blazing at us at once with the big guns on Cemetery hill and from the batteries that covered the hill called Little Round Top, and the bullets and the shells lashed us through and through. Hasn't that firing come a little nearer, Jarvis?"

"Yes. I can see two of our skirmishers crawling through the bush."

"All right, let 'em work; it's their time, and ours hasn't come. When we got across that valley, Jarvis, there weren't many of us left, but we went on all the same, and then the rifles began on us, 50,000 or 60,000 of 'em, but then they looked to me like a million. I couldn't see anything but black smoke and red flame, and as I went on I stumbled over the bodies of my comrades. Even now, Jarvis, I sometimes hear in my ears the roaring of all those cannon and rifles. Now and then when the smoke was driven aside by the blaze of the great guns we could see the northern batteries, and we kept straight toward 'em. We haven't much longer to wait now, Jarvis. There's the colonel across yonder, and he's drawing his belt a little tighter. That means that the charge is coming, and he'll lead it himself."

"I don't hear the trumpet any more, Wilson."

"No, it's sung its song for the day. The enemy are crawling into the earthworks now. As I told you, Jarvis, we went on up the hill and into the mouths of the Yankee guns. Oh, they were there all right enough waiting for us, and I don't remember much that happened then except a roar and a blaze and yells as if a million devils were shouting at once. All of our men who were left were killed or taken, and I fell down with one bullet through my leg and another through my shoulder."

"You were taken prisoner, Wilson?"

"Of course. When the battle was over, a tall young fellow with blue eyes and brown hair, just about as old as you are now, lifted me up and carried me into the Yankee camp. He brought me a doctor and until I got well he waited on me same as if he had been my brother. That was a curious young fellow, Jarvis—at least I thought so then, but not now perhaps. He didn't seem to have any malice toward us of the south, though he was fighting us with all his might. He had got a little wound himself in the charge, just enough to put him off active duty, but not enough to keep him from helping me. It was then that I began to find out that the Yankees were the same sort of men under the skin that we were. We'd argue the question of the war in the most peaceful way, just like two preachers. Then he'd tell me about his home way up north, and I'd tell him about mine way down south. Hark to that, Jarvis! The fight's swinging close."

The fire of the skirmishers grew fiercer. To the ears of the listening men came the occasional shout of the combatants. Overhead a coppery sun sailed in a sky of cloudless blue, and the air became closer and hotter. The deserted huts in the village looked like emblems of desolation. Everything betokened the coming conflict.

"Well, the Yankee nursed me for near a month," resumed the regular, "and I suppose that I owe my life to him—at least I feel that way. We must have had a hundred arguments about the war, and I never could convert him, and he never could convert me, but we didn't worry about that when we parted. I've never forgot, Jarvis, what that Yankee did for me, and it's one reason why when the war was over I concluded that as I had been fighting against Uncle Sam for four years I ought to fight for him awhile, and as a matter of fact I've been fighting for him ever since—years and years against the Indians out west and then against the Spaniards in Cuba. Take a last look at your Krag, Jarvis. We ain't got more'n two minutes left now."

A low murmur accompanied by a gentle click of metal arose around them. It was the men gathering themselves for the charge and moving their rifles softly. The fire of the skirmishers died, and the stillness of expectation took its place.

"Did you know the name of the man who nursed you at Gettysburg, Wilson?" whispered Jarvis.

"Of course I did," replied Wilson. "His name was Philip Jarvis, and he lived at a little place called Hometown, away up in New York state, on lake Ontario."

"Why, that was my father!" said the youth.

"Of course it was," replied the regular, "and I've known it all the while. I knew it the first time I saw you, and that was why I took up with you. It was why I took the trouble to save your life at least a half dozen times here, for you were young, Jarvis, and you didn't know much about soldiering when you came. And it's why, too, boy, if I were back there with you today I'd help you decorate all them Yankee graves. Steady now, Jarvis, and we'll go together into the earthwork."

"Forward, men! Charge!" cried the colonel in a voice like the snap of a pistol shot.

"Now, lad, up and at 'em!" said Wilson in the ear of his comrade.

Street Car Bills to Be Quickly Crowded Through In Pennsylvania Senate.

Harrisburg, May 30.—There was introduced in the senate Wednesday afternoon a bill which will give corporations the right to construct either underground or elevated railroads in cities, boroughs and townships, and a bill which will give to street railway companies considerable more power than they now possess.

They were introduced by Mr. Focht, of Union, and Mr. Emery, of Mercer. Both senators are identified with the dominant faction of the Republican party in the state. Immediately after the bills were introduced they were referred to the judiciary special committee, and about 10 minutes later they were favorably reported to the senate, one by Mr. Sproul, of Chester, and the other by Mr. Grady, of Philadelphia. It was rumored around the capitol that it was the intention to have the bills read first time last night, second time today and passed finally in the senate on Friday morning. This, however, could not be verified.

One amendment in the Emory bill will give to a new company the right to use Broad street, Philadelphia, over the use of which there has been considerable contention in recent years.

Beyond the introduction of the Philadelphia railway bills and the reporting from committees of several measures, little was done, and adjournment was taken until 9 o'clock last night.

The senate immediately took up the consideration of bills on the first reading calendar when it reconvened last night. Among the bills read and passed were the two railroad bills introduced in the afternoon. The Focht bill was previously recommitted and some of the phraseology amended and some minor changes made. Unless the present program is changed both bills will be passed finally on Friday and will be messaged to the house Monday afternoon. The two bills have attracted more attention than any other bills, with the exception of the "rippers."

A bill introduced by Mr. Heinle, of Centre, Wednesday afternoon, which appropriates $10,000 for the erection of a statue of A. G. Curtin, Pennsylvania's Civil War governor, at Bellefonte, was favorably reported from committee and passed first reading last night.

The senate adjourned until tonight so that senators can have the opportunity of attending the Memorial day exercises at Gettysburg.

Among the senate bills passed finally in the house was this one:

Providing for a submission to a popular vote at the next general election the proposed constitutional amendment for personal registration in cities.

Among the bills reported from the appropriations committee were these:

State normal schools, $260,000; Altoona hospital, $15,000; Bradford hospital, $19,000; Ladies' G. A. R. Home, $15,000; Clearfield hospital, $4,000; Home of Colored Women, $8,000; Dubois hospital, $3,000.

House adjourned until 4 p. m. Monday.

Killed One; Injured Others.

Benton Harbor, Mich., May 30.—A passenger train on the Big Four ran into a gypsy wagon south of Niles, killing Ethel Whipple, aged 6. Her brother, Pabst, is badly injured, and the father, Charles Whipple, is badly injured. The accident occurred at a blind crossing and the wagon was not seen until too late to stop the train. The wagon was completely wrecked, but the horses escaped injury.

JUMPED FROM A CAR

Scales Fell on Him and William Clay Was Painfully Injured.

William Clay had his left leg injured yesterday morning while endeavoring to jump off a car in the West End. Clay had a pair of scales in his hands and after the conductor pulled the bell he thought the car would not stop until it reached the corner of Jethro and Lisbon streets, and jumped off. He was thrown to the bricks with great force, the scales falling on his leg. He was otherwise uninjured.

MEMORIAL DAY.

The greatest Memorial day oration ever delivered was Lincoln's Gettysburg speech. It cannot be read too often by American patriots. We therefore reproduce it as the most appropriate sentiment of the day:

"Fourscore and seven years ago our fathers brought forth upon this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal. Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting place for those who gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But in a large sense we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it far above our power to add or detract.

"The world will little note, nor long remember, what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us, the living, rather to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us, that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion; that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain; that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, and for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

COMMANDER TAGGART'S ZEAL.

Department Commander E. F. Taggart, of Akron, has not been in office very long, but he has attracted considerable attention in his brief management of the affairs of the G. A. R. in this section of Ohio. On Tuesday he sent the following telegram to the mayor of Lancaster in regard to a proposed Memorial day athletic contest which the school boys of that town propose to hold:

"If the citizens of Lancaster allow the desecration of Memorial day by permitting their high school to hold 'a field day' carnival, your people are not deserving of entertaining our next encampment. The department commander enters the united protest of the Grand Army of Ohio against all such desecration on this most holy day."

The school boys were visited by the mayor of Lancaster and readily agreed to postpone their field day. They had meant no discourtesy to the G. A. R. and had chosen May 30 for their sports merely because the day was a holiday. It is probable that much of the alleged desecration of the day sacred to the memory of American patriots comes from similar thoughtlessness. Commander Taggart's zeal will doubtless be commended by his comrades. Still, there are worse ways of observing Decoration day than by engaging in manly sports.

McLEAN THE VICTOR.

The state convention of the Democracy is to be held in Columbus in July. This was settled at the meeting this week of the state central committee of the party. The decision seems to indicate that John R. McLean and no one else is boss. Tom L. Johnson, of Cleveland, wanted the convention held in the Forest City. McLean decreed otherwise and his order was obeyed. As a crumb of comfort Cuyhoga county was given the temporary chairmanship of the convention. The result is taken to indicate that McLean controls the state central committee and will control the convention and that Col. Kilbourne will be the Democratic nominee for governor. Republicans will be satisfied, though Democracy will not. Kilbourne will be defeated with ease and dispatch.

Some political observers are now predicting that both Tillman and McLaurin, of South Carolina, will lose their senatorial seats, the citizens taking the ground that the fight is the senators' and not theirs. Southerners evidently don't think a personal quarrel that is not settled at the pistols' point is settled as tradition and "honah" demand.

It is impossible to make a complete newspaper unless a complete day is devoted to the task. The News Review is not as complete as usual today, as it gives its force a half holiday. But for all that it is the best newspaper published in East Liverpool today, as it is every day.

GLEANINGS OF A DAY

A. J. Britton met with a painful accident yesterday afternoon while at work at the Thomas knob works. He was engaged at drawing kiln and had an arm full of insulating wire which he proposed throwing into a box. His thumb and first finger of his left hand were caught by the falling wire and were badly lacerated. The wounds bled profusely and after the flow of blood was stopped he went to the office of a physician where the wounds were dressed. He will be unable to work for several days.

Eugene Swaney, employed at the E. M. Knowles pottery, had a narrow escape from being injured while at work yesterday afternoon. He had finished for the day and after sweeping up the scraps and putting them in a box started out to throw them over the bank. As he passed out of the door a loose brick fell, and just missing his head lit in the box. Swaney was badly frightened, thinking that some one had thrown the brick at him.

Two young boys employed at the Sevres China company engaged in a fight after they were through work Tuesday evening. The boys were joking with each other and it was claimed that one of them got mad and struck the other in the face several times, and he is now wearing a black eye.

It is announced on apparently good authority, that the Chelsea white ware pottery, of New Cumberland, will be put in full operation within the next two weeks. A force will be put on to repair the plant at once.

Claude Hendricks, a jiggerman at the Thompson pottery, is off duty threatened with an attack of fever. His place is filled by his brother, Harry Hendricks.

The Cleveland & Pittsburg yesterday placed a force of men at work tearing out the old switch at the Laughlin No. 1 pottery and placing in a new one.

F. Massey left this morning for Ford City where he has taken a job as rish maker in the pottery at that place. He was formerly employed at Murphy's.

J. W. Clark left yesterday morning for Anderson, Ind., where he will be employed for several weeks erecting new kilns for the Encaustic Tile company.

The contract has been let for the tearing down of one and the erection of three new kilns at the Union and work will be started the first of next week.

A carload of machinery to be used at the new pottery being erected at Sebring by Sebring Bros. was loaded and shipped to Sebring today.

The printers and fillers-in at the Sevres China company were compelled to loaf yesterday, there being a shortage of ware.

William H. Baker, who has been employed as a dishmaker at Sebring, has taken a dish job at the Murphy plant.

Thomas Farmer has accepted a position at the Dresden pottery working on the big jigger.

Samuel Wilgues has accepted a position making handles at the East Liverpool pottery.

B. Miller has accepted a position as presser at Laughlin No. 1.

George Freymark has taken a job as presser at the Union.

NOTICE TO POTTERS.

On and after July 1 we wish to conduct a strictly union Brotherhood factory at Western Uniform scale of wages; we will want journeymen jiggermen, pressers, dippers, kilnhands, printers, saggermakers, packers and coopers; we will also need experienced fillers-in, gilders, decalcomania works, etc.; we, therefore, prefer married men for the above situations who have girls or boys that are accustomed to working at any of the above branches throughout the pottery; we can give steady work and desire only people steady in their habits. Send all applications direct to Ford China Co., Ford City, Pa., and for any additional information apply to A. S. Hughes or T. J. Duffy, of East Liverpool, O. 292-s

Doan's Kidney Pills relieve backache,

East Liverpool citizens endorse them.

Mr. Thomas Laughlin, of 172 Sophia street, engineer, says: "I caught cold and neglected it. It settled in my back and kidneys and forced me to quit work and almost cost me my life. I could not move without suffering, and often could neither sit, stand or lie for pain. The secretions of the kidneys went wrong and distressed and annoyed me both night and day. I took medicines for two years, but did not get well. When I read of Doan's Kidney Pills I got a box at the W. & W. pharmacy. Noticing some improvement by the time I had taken the first half of the box, I continued until I had taken four boxes and my back was all right, as well as the urinary trouble. I will substantiate my statement of Doan Kidney Pills if any one will come to my house to investigate for themselves. My wife had some backache; she took Doan's Kidney Pills and was cured."

MAN AND RIG MISSING

Well Dressed Stranger Victimizes a Livery Stable Keeper In Steubenville.

Steubenville, May 30.—Last Wednesday a stranger went to the livery stable of George Smith, on South Fifth street, and representing that he was an agent for the McCormick reaper and mower manufactory of Chicago, hired a horse and buggy to drive through the country, saying he would return on Saturday. He has not returned.

Fatal Brevity.

There is a little settlement of New Hampshire people in Kiowa county, Colo. Among other things they brought with them the New Hampshire aversion to using any more words in conversation than are absolutely necessary. Two of them met on the road recently and indulged in the following dialogue:

"Mornin, Si."

"Mornin, Josh."

"Turpentine."

"Mornin."

"Mornin."

A few days later the men met again, and here's the way a hard luck story was told in mighty few words:

"Mornin, Si!"

"Mornin, Josh!"

"What'd you say you gave your horse for bots?"

"Turpentine."

"Killed mine."

"Mine too."

"Mornin!"

"Mornin!"

Section 2. This ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage and legal publication.

MEMORIAL DAY.

The greatest Memorial day oration ever delivered was Lincoln's Gettysburg speech. It cannot be read too often by American patriots. We therefore reproduce it as the most appropriate sentiment of the day:

"Fourscore and seven years ago our fathers brought forth upon this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal. Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting place for those who gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But in a large sense we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it far above our power to add or detract.

"The world will little note, nor long remember, what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us, the living, rather to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us, that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion; that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain; that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, and for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

COMMANDER TAGGART'S ZEAL.

Department Commander E. F. Taggart, of Akron, has not been in office very long, but he has attracted considerable attention in his brief management of the affairs of the G. A. R. in this section of Ohio. On Tuesday he sent the following telegram to the mayor of Lancaster in regard to a proposed Memorial day athletic contest which the school boys of that town propose to hold:

"If the citizens of Lancaster allow the desecration of Memorial day by permitting their high school to hold 'a field day' carnival, your people are not deserving of entertaining our next encampment. The department commander enters the united protest of the Grand Army of Ohio against all such desecration on this most holy day."

The school boys were visited by the mayor of Lancaster and readily agreed to postpone their field day. They had meant no discourtesy to the G. A. R. and had chosen May 30 for their sports merely because the day was a holiday. It is probable that much of the alleged desecration of the day sacred to the memory of American patriots comes from similar thoughtlessness. Commander Taggart's zeal will doubtless be commended by his comrades. Still, there are worse ways of observing Decoration day than by engaging in manly sports.

McLEAN THE VICTOR.

The state convention of the Democracy is to be held in Columbus in July. This was settled at the meeting this week of the state central committee of the party. The decision seems to indicate that John R. McLean and no one else is boss. Tom L. Johnson, of Cleveland, wanted the convention held in the Forest City. McLean decreed otherwise and his order was obeyed. As a crumb of comfort Cuyhoga county was given the temporary chairmanship of the convention. The result is taken to indicate that McLean controls the state central committee and will control the convention and that Col. Kilbourne will be the Democratic nominee for governor. Republicans will be satisfied, though Democracy will not. Kilbourne will be defeated with ease and dispatch.

Some political observers are now predicting that both Tillman and McLaurin, of South Carolina, will lose their senatorial seats, the citizens taking the ground that the fight is the senators' and not theirs. Southerners evidently don't think a personal quarrel that is not settled at the pistols' point is settled as tradition and "honah" demand.

It is impossible to make a complete newspaper unless a complete day is devoted to the task. The News Review is not as complete as usual today, as it gives its force a half holiday. But for all that it is the best newspaper published in East Liverpool today, as it is every day.

Steubenville, May 30.—C. A. Carroll was made up from parts of Jefferson, Harrison, Tuscarawas, Stark and Columbiana counties in 1831, and there is no record in Carroll county of the transfers previous to that date, and Mr. Tope is engaged in completing the record.

In order to get the deeds to lands in Carroll county Mr. Tope must read all the deed records in Jefferson county up to 1831.

After reaching a stage of 24 feet, the river started to recede last night, but very slow, as the marks at the wharf this morning registered 23 feet. GLEANINGS OF A DAY

In and About THE LOCAL POTTERIES

A. J. Britton met with a painful accident yesterday afternoon while at work at the Thomas knob works. He was engaged at drawing kiln and had an arm full of insulating wire which he proposed throwing into a box. His thumb and first finger of his left hand were caught by the falling wire and were badly lacerated. The wounds bled profusely and after the flow of blood was stopped he went to the office of a physician where the wounds were dressed. He will be unable to work for several days.

Eugene Swaney, employed at the E. M. Knowles pottery, had a narrow escape from being injured while at work yesterday afternoon. He had finished for the day and after sweeping up the scraps and putting them in a box started out to throw them over the bank. As he passed out of the door a loose brick fell, and just missing his head lit in the box. Swaney was badly frightened, thinking that some one had thrown the brick at him.

Two young boys employed at the Sevres China company engaged in a fight after they were through work Tuesday evening. The boys were joking with each other and it was claimed that one of them got mad and struck the other in the face several times, and he is now wearing a black eye.

It is announced on apparently good authority, that the Chelsea white ware pottery, of New Cumberland, will be put in full operation within the next two weeks. A force will be put on to repair the plant at once.

Claude Hendricks, a jiggerman at the Thompson pottery, is off duty threatened with an attack of fever. His place is filled by his brother, Harry Hendricks.

The Cleveland & Pittsburg yesterday placed a force of men at work tearing out the old switch at the Laughlin No. 1 pottery and placing in a new one.

F. Massey left this morning for Ford City where he has taken a job as rish maker in the pottery at that place. He was formerly employed at Murphy's.

J. W. Clark left yesterday morning for Anderson, Ind., where he will be employed for several weeks erecting new kilns for the Encaustic Tile company.

The contract has been let for the tearing down of one and the erection of three new kilns at the Union and work will be started the first of next week.

A carload of machinery to be used at the new pottery being erected at Sebring by Sebring Bros. was loaded and shipped to Sebring today.

The printers and fillers-in at the Sevres China company were compelled to loaf yesterday, there being a shortage of ware.

William H. Baker, who has been employed as a dishmaker at Sebring, has taken a dish job at the Murphy plant.

Thomas Farmer has accepted a position at the Dresden pottery working on the big jigger.

Samuel Wilgues has accepted a position making handles at the East Liverpool pottery.

B. Miller has accepted a position as presser at Laughlin No. 1.

George Freymark has taken a job as presser at the Union.

NOTICE TO POTTERS.

On and after July 1 we wish to conduct a strictly union Brotherhood factory at Western Uniform scale of wages; we will want journeymen jiggermen, pressers, dippers, kilnhands, printers, saggermakers, packers and coopers; we will also need experienced fillers-in, gilders, decalcomania works, etc.; we, therefore, prefer married men for the above situations who have girls or boys that are accustomed to working at any of the above branches throughout the pottery; we can give steady work and desire only people steady in their habits. Send all applications direct to Ford China Co., Ford City, Pa., and for any additional information apply to A. S. Hughes or T. J. Duffy, of East Liverpool, O. 292-s

Doan's Kidney Pills relieve backache,

East Liverpool citizens endorse them.

Mr. Thomas Laughlin, of 172 Sophia street, engineer, says: "I caught cold and neglected it. It settled in my back and kidneys and forced me to quit work and almost cost me my life. I could not move without suffering, and often could neither sit, stand or lie for pain. The secretions of the kidneys went wrong and distressed and annoyed me both night and day. I took medicines for two years, but did not get well. When I read of Doan's Kidney Pills I got a box at the W. & W. pharmacy. Noticing some improvement by the time I had taken the first half of the box, I continued until I had taken four boxes and my back was all right, as well as the urinary trouble. I will substantiate my statement of Doan Kidney Pills if any one will come to my house to investigate for themselves. My wife had some backache; she took Doan's Kidney Pills and was cured."

Steubenville, May 30.—Last Wednesday a stranger went to the livery stable of George Smith, on South Fifth street, and representing that he was an agent for the McCormick reaper and mower manufactory of Chicago, hired a horse and buggy to drive through the country, saying he would return on Saturday. He has not returned.

Fatal Brevity.

There is a little settlement of New Hampshire people in Kiowa county, Colo. Among other things they brought with them the New Hampshire aversion to using any more words in conversation than are absolutely necessary. Two of them met on the road recently and indulged in the following dialogue:

"Mornin, Si."

"Mornin, Josh."

"Turpentine."

"Mornin."

"Mornin."

A few days later the men met again, and here's the way a hard luck story was told in mighty few words:

"Mornin, Si!"

"Mornin, Josh!"

"What'd you say you gave your horse for bots?"

"Turpentine."

"Killed mine."

"Mine too."

"Mornin!"

"Mornin!"

Section 1. That the grade lines on Denver street be, and the same are hereby fixed and established by beginning on the north curb line of the said Denver street, at the east curb line of Edwards Avenue, and at an elevation of ninety-two (92) feet above city datum, and running thence with the said north curb line with a uniformly descending grade of three and forty-nine hundredths (3.49) per hundred (100) for one hundred eighty-six (186) feet to an elevation of eighty-five and fifty-one hundredths (85.51) feet above city datum; thence along the circumference of a circle whose radius is fourteen hundred thirty-three and thirty-five hundredths (1433.35) feet for one hundred thirty-one and sixty hundredths (131.60) feet to an elevation of seventy-four and ninety-four hundredths (74.94) feet; thence with a uniformly descending grade of twelve and sixty-seven hundredths (12.67) per one hundred (100) for seventy-seven and forty hundredths (77.40) feet to an elevation of sixty-five and eleven hundredths (65.11) feet above city datum at the west curb line of Gaston Avenue, and the south curb line shall have the same fall and the same curvature as the north curb line, but shall be set six (6) inches lower than the north curb line.

$1,000,000 A DAY

China Would Have Had to Pay If Delaying Settlement,

THE DRAGON THEN YIELDED.

Agreed to Pay Indemnities of 450,000,000 Taels, Equivalent to About $337,000,000, at Present Rate of Exchange.

Washington, May 30.—The department of state has been informed reliably that the Chinese government has issued a decree agreeing to pay an indemnity of 450,000,000 taels, equivalent to about $337,000,000 at the present rate of exchange. It is known now that the whole subject of indemnity will be closed up before the end of the present month. If that is not done and evacuation is not under way on a large scale, then the Chinese government must be assessed $1,000,000 each day after June 1 next, to compensate the powers for the maintenance of their military forces in China. Under this whip the Chinese government has been forced to yield. It is not known that the powers have agreed on the form and extent of guarantee, but now that the amount of indemnity is fixed not much difficulty is expected on this score.

The United States government has not taken part in the selection of a military commandant to succeed Field Marshal Count von Waldersee in the supreme command at Pekin. Having dispensed with our military force in China, the United States is not concerned in the personality of the military chief. Our legation guard will not owe allegiance or obedience to any foreign commander, but will be answerable solely to the United States minister or charge. In the event of common peril the several legation guards may unite for the common defense, in which case they may select their own leader, as they did during the defense of the legationers last year.

AMERICA MAY APPROVE.

Cubans Placed Construction on Platt Amendment, Which Must Be Considered.

Washington, May 30.—Secretary Root has received a cablegram from General Wood, at Havana, briefly confirming the press report of the adoption, by a vote of 15 yeas to 14 nays, the report of the committee on relations with the United States, accepting in behalf of the convention the terms of the Platt amendment. It is not possible at this moment to secure here even an abstract of the resolutions adopted. It is understood that without undertaking materially to change the language of the Platt amendment the convention, by the addition of reports of interviews with Secretary Root and otherwise, has placed upon the amendment itself, a construction that will require very serious consideration.

Secretary Root has been in daily communication by cable with General Wood, and is acquainted with the proceedings of the delegates and the negotiations which led up to this action. General Wood, in turn, has acquainted the constitutional delegates with the secretary's views in answer to their efforts to place a construction upon the Platt amendment. Hence the weight of opinion inclines to the belief that even as it stands the convention's action will not be disapproved from Washington. It is suggested by the officials that there is no occasion at present for the Washington government to take action upon this matter, either by accepting or rejecting the convention's work.

GEORGE D. RISE SUICIDED.

Drank Poison on Train and Died In Station at Lebanon, Pa.

Lebanon, Pa., May 30.—George D. Rise, proprietor of the Lebanon house, 257 West Fourteenth street, New York, committed suicide. He drank a poisonous fluid while on a train from New York bound for this city, and died in the baggage room at Lebanon station. Deceased was a resident of this city for about a quarter of a century or more and held the positions of bank teller and cashier and was well known in banking circles throughout the state.

The following unaddressed and unsigned note was found in his pocket: "I am George D. Rise, of Lebanon Pa. Take me there and send word to my son there, Harry D. Rise, No. 142 North Eighth street. I have lost everything and I scarcely know what I am doing. I have taken cyanide of potassium or pistol to end my troubles. No one to blame but myself. My family don't know anything of this yet, nor the reason. Private papers in envelope in my coat pocket for my son."

His widow and daughter in New York and the son in this city survive him.

HANNA MEN INTERESTED.

A New Concern Formed to Take Over Massillon Mines.

Cleveland, May 30.—The Massillon Coal Mining company, which will take over a large majority of the mines in the Massillon district, on which options are held by J. J. Phillips, of this city, was incorporated by D. R. Hanna, T. E. Young, Andrew Squire, C. C. Bolton and S. Hitchcock. All the incorporators except Mr. Squire, who is attorney for the firm, are members or employes of the firm of M. A. Hanna & Co. The capital stock authorized is $1,000,000.

The new company will practically control the output of the entire Massillon field.

AN ARMY SKETCH

By WILLIAM HENRY SHELTON

IN THESE days of wars and lootings, when China is being despoiled by her enemies, when general officers superintend the division of the swag and dead Boxers flit from the battlefield to the arms of their ancestors with their pockets turned inside out, it may be interesting to recall how we did those things during that remote affair known to Americans as "the war." The looting was not always of the enemy. Uncle Sam was sometimes himself the victim. The incident I am about to relate took place in the fall of 1863, after the Gettysburg campaign.

I remember the camp of the battery in the angle of a wood, the officers' tents on the high ground at the upper end of a small field, and directly in front of them the park of guns with hastily constructed harness racks of poles alongside the canvas, where the men oiled the harness and polished the brasses, and the parallel line of dark colored horses at the picket rope, with a group of grays at one end, used for hauling the battery wagons and forge. We were somewhere in Virginia, and the month November.

It was a temporary camp, and the men had been allowed to take the great canvas paulins from the carriages, with which, over a frame of fence rails, they had made an irregular line of wigwams just within the edge of the woods. I was a humble sergeant, in command of the sixth gun at this time, and occupied the wigwam at the end of the row with another sergeant and two corporals.

It was just that time of year when the soldier's appetite is most vigorous. It was not exactly hunger that prompted the raid on the commissary, but a craving for luxuries. Our idea of luxury was a ham and an extra 50 pound box of hard tack. We could pound the hard bread into crumbs and fry in ham fat, which, well seasoned, made a dish fit for a king. One of the corporals, who is now the editor of a western paper, and myself left camp just after dark one evening armed with a hatchet and bound for the stores of the commissary of the artillery brigade of our corps. As we passed around the park of guns we noted the guard tramping silently between the lines of carriages and his fellow marching back and forth along the picket rope, calling now and then to a refractory horse. The glitter of campfires marked the ground of the different batteries and wagon trains, and half a mile away on the crest of a hill was the camp of the commissary, toward which we were tending.

The commissary had begun the erection of a log house, the walls of which were already breast high. From their shelter we were able to survey our field of operations. Fifty feet in front of us was the collection of stores ranged in two compact rows of boxes and barrels, under a roof of canvas. The stores formed the sides of the tent, piled up to the eaves, and through the open center streamed the light from a fire of rails, where the infantry guard was listening to the yarns of a group of teamsters who were smoking their pipes and drinking their quart cups of coffee.

There was a box of hard bread on the top and end of the wall of stores, and to this Corporal E. made his way, keeping the boxes and barrels between him and the group at the fire. The canvas paulin was drawn over the top of the coveted box and corded out to a stake.

Slowly and patiently the corporal worked, gradually sliding out the box until an unavoidable grating of the canvas stopped the conversation about the fire. The corporal sat down in the shadow until the alarm was over.

"It's nothin but the wind," said one of the teamsters, upon which the stories about the campfire were resumed. When he had finally secured the prize, the corporal brought it back behind the log wall. After a whispered consultation I started for camp with the 50 pound box of hard bread on my shoulder, leaving him the hatchet and the more difficult task of securing the ham. I had been comfortably in bed for some time, lazily watching the smoldering logs and listening for the corporal's return. I was just falling off into a doze.

"Are you awake, sergeant? Stir out the boys. I've got a barrel of sugar open over in the woods, and we must bring it all into camp at once. Here is a haversack full I tied up in my blouse."

After my departure the corporal had transferred his field of operations to the lower wall of stores, which he had reached by going back into the field beyond the bright light from the guard fire. Here the ground sloped rapidly down into a meadow bottom. With a great deal of patience he had finally succeeded in working out a barrel which he felt sure contained hams. After rolling this down the hill, always keeping in cover of the other stores from the group at the fire, and to a distance where it was safe to spring the head and examine the contents it was found to contain white beans.

An ordinary workman would have left the barrel in the field and probably abandoned the whole dangerous business. Corporal E. was not a man of ordinary methods. He was not the shabby fellow to leave a barrel of beans exposed to the night air, so with painstaking care he restored it to its place in the commissary's stock before trundling out the second barrel. If he had found the desired hams in this barrel, he would have restored the head after taking out one ham and would then have devoted another hazardous half hour to returning the remainder of the package to its original place. Instead of hams, however, the second barrel was found to contain sugar, and this the corporal rolled joyfully across the wide field into the edge of the timber, where he opened it with the hatchet and came into camp with the sample I have described.

Besides our own household we took the quartermaster and the harness maker into the secret, and before morning half the sugar was in grain bags at the bottom of the battery wagon and the other half nailed up in cracker boxes with the company stores.

In those days I served as company clerk in addition to my regular duties, and each morning after breakfast I went up to the captain's tent and made up the daily reports. After completing this duty on the morning following the adventure I have related, knowing that Captain R., with whom I was on rather easy terms, would hugely enjoy a description of our night's prowling, I told him the story to the minutest detail. "Just as I have often told you, sergeant," exclaimed the captain. "You'll fetch up at the Dry Tortugas some of these fine days."

"Of course," he continued, "that would not be of any consequence to me, but I should be sorry to have Battery L disgraced."

We were still laughing over the affair when there was a clatter of horses' hoofs outside, and the butt of a riding whip tapped on the tent pole. Throwing back the curtains, we confronted Major Mandeville, the artillery brigade quartermaster, and Captain X., the commissary of subsistence, who was a young swell from Boston. Each officer was attended by his mounted orderly. The military salutes were passed, and the major presented the commissary and his business, at the same time stating that a barrel of sugar had been taken the night before from the brigade stores.

"Now," continued the major, "I have had my wagon train searched, Lieutenant Stewart is having a search made in Battery B, the Fifth Maine and the Vermont battery are doing the same. Be assured, Captain R.," said the major, with excessive military politeness, "that I can't believe that you have any man in Battery L who would be guilty of such a deed. Nevertheless I am sure you will oblige my friend, the commissary, by having a search made."

"Certainly," said Captain R., turning to me. "Sergeant, you will see that a strict search is made in Battery L."

I stood at attention, saluted the captain in reply and, making a half wheel in great style, strode off to our wigwam.

The corporal had taken to the woods with the haversack of sugar when he had seen the approach of the cavalcade, and it is needless to say that my strict search was fruitless. More than one mess that winter had clear white sirup of our own manufacture, and the captain occasionally demanded to know if a strict search had been made in Battery L.

Memorial Week In 1861.

A war tragedy which fired the northern heart the last week in May, 1861, was the death of Colonel Ephraim E. Ellsworth at Alexandria, Va. When the Federal forces crossed Long bridge from Washington to the soil of old Virginia May 24, Colonel Ellsworth led his regiment, the Eleventh New York volunteers, or First Fire zouaves, to the heart of the city. On passing a tavern known as the Marshall House Ellsworth saw a southern flag flying from a staff on the roof. The impetuous soldier dashed up the stairway to the roof, followed by two noncombatants. Private Frank E. Brownell remained on guard at the first landing below the roof. After tearing the flag from the staff, Ellsworth started down, but was met on the way by the hotel proprietor, James T. Jackson, who shot him through the heart with one charge of a double barrel shotgun. The second barrel Jackson discharged at Private Brownell. Brownell was not touched and immediately put a bullet through the head of Jackson.

Looking Backward Forty Years.

Looking backward 40 years to the last week of May, 1861, what varied reminiscences spring up—painful, instructive, amusing. Everybody who was anybody had on fighting armor, and fighting blood stood at the finger tips. Victory—speedy, overwhelming, revengeful—was in sight, in fact untold thousands of bumptious striplings were afraid the war wouldn't last long enough for them to smell gunpowder. Recruits rushed wildly to every arm of the service—any way to get a gun and uniform. Such guns and such uniforms! The state arsenals usually had militia gray clothing, the same hue as that adopted by the Confederates. Rifles were scarce, and for the first couple of years tens of thousands carried the old flintlock muskets changed to percussion locks, issued to recruits in May, 1861. In the west good rifles were so scarce that the captors of Vicksburg were glad to get the Enfield rifles found in the Confederate camps. These had been imported from England.

In 1861 the government was slow to accept cavalry and artillery, and many squadrons and batteries recruited in May were compelled to wait many months before the government would take them in. Not a war for cavalry and artillery, thought the military minds in Washington.

Grant, in May, 1861, was an unsuccessful seeker for a position suitable to his training; Sherman was in Washington, adviser to Scott; Sheridan a second lieutenant on the Pacific coast.

THE 25 ct. FAMILY DOCTOR.

CEDAR SPRINGS, MICH.

Mrs. Isaac Dunham, a well-known lady of that place, writes: "I cannot praise Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills too much. They did for me what doctors and other medicines could not do. I was troubled with severe disorders of the kidneys and enlargement of the liver. My family doctor treated me the whole of last winter, but did not help me very much, so I gave him up and began using Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. The result was simply wonderful. I am now strong and healthy again, thanks to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills."

EATON RAPIDS, MICH.

Mrs. Rose Chaffee, a business woman of Eaton Rapids, writes: "For a long time my system was in a terribly weakened state. Biliousness, severe indigestion and kidney troubles made me so miserable that I was hardly able to work. A friend told me of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and I found them just as represented. They restored my health to me, and I think they are a wonderful medicine."

The marked success of Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills with Backache, Kidney Trouble, Constipation, Headache and Stomach Weakness make them a family requisite. 25 cts. a box.

MARTIN MODERATOR

Chosen by Reformed Presbyterian Synod, at Pittsburg.

WAS CHOSEN BY ACCLAMATION.

Rev. Samuel McNaugher, of Allegheny City, Pa., Elected Assistant Clerk, Owing to Sproull's Absence—Delegates From U. S. and Canada.

Pittsburg, May 30.—The general synod of the Reformed Presbyterian Church of America convened in the Eighth Street church of the denomination in this city. The synod was called to order by the moderator, the Rev. Dr. F. M. Foster, of New York, and a motion was passed fixing the time of the annual sermon as last evening about 7:30 o'clock.

After the opening prayer had been made by the moderator, a roll call showed the presence of over 200 delegates, both lay and clerical, from all parts of the United States and Canada. The first matter taken up by the synod as an organized body was the transaction of unfinished business, which had been left in the hands of special committees at the last synod.

The Rev. Samuel McNaugher, of Allegheny, was elected assistant clerk pro tem to assist in completing the roll, owing to the absence of the Rev. T. C. Sproull, the regular assistant clerk. The moderator called for nominations for the new moderator, and the Rev. D. C. Martin, of the East End, was nominated by the Rev. Thomas McFall, of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia. It was moved and seconded that the nomination be made by acclamation. This was carried, and Mr. Martin was unanimously elected.

U. P. ASSEMBLY ENDS.

Meets Next Year In Pittsburg—Appropriations Made—McMillin Honored.

Des Moines, Ia., May 30.—The general assembly of the United Presbyterian Church of North America adjourned, to meet next year at Pittsburg. Appropriations from the treasury were made during the session as follows:

Foreign missions, $140,249; home missions, $100,550; freedmen's missions, $55,000; church extension, $55,000; education, colleges and seminaries, $25,000; other educational, $8,000; ministerial relief, $10,000; assembly fund, $7,000; publication, $500. Dr. W. H. McMillin, of Allegheny, was named to represent the assembly on the board of trustees of Christian Endeavor society.

The committee of the assembly on bills and overtures on the membership covenant reported that there was a demand for a change in the form of questions put when members are being received. The committee held, however, that none of the memorials submitted covers all the points desired, and recommended that a committee of five shall be appointed to frame a membership covenant and submit it to the next general assembly. The recommendations were adopted. The committee on nominations will select this committee, which is to report not later than Jan. 1, 1902.

The assembly voted against the recommendation of Rev. Dr. Samuel Collins for the appointment of a committee to prepare a list of consanguinity and affinity within which marriage shall not be contracted.

SCARED BY A DOG

A Poisoned Animal Gave Mrs. John Joyce a Bad Fright.

Mrs. John Joyce was badly frightened yesterday afternoon near her home on Jethro street by a poisoned dog which ran into her yard. The canine was suffering intense agony and from its actions Mrs. Joyce thought it must be a mad dog. She quickly closed the door and locked it, but was surprised a few minutes later to see the dog lie down and die. The carcass was removed and no damage was done except to badly frighten Mrs. Joyce.

Fearful Punishment For An Awful Crime, In Florida.

WHITE WOMAN NEGRO'S VICTIM.

Bartow, Fla., May 30.—Fred Rochelle, a negro, 35 years of age, who criminally assaulted and then murdered Mrs. Rena Taggart, a well-known and respected white woman, of this city, was burned at the stake here.

Negro Assaulted His Victim.

Mrs. Taggart, who was born and reared in this place, and was a woman of good family and reputation, went fishing alone in a small row boat that she kept at the city bridge over Piaco creek. This is in full view of the public thoroughfare. A few minutes before noon, desiring to return home, she rowed her boat to the bridge and made it fast. A negro man was fishing from the bridge at the time. Mrs. Taggart started home and had proceeded only a few steps in the swamp toward the open prairie and thence to the street, when she was approached by Rochelle, who had been hiding in the swamp. He seized her and she broke loose, and, screaming, ran from the swamp into the prairie, where he overtook her.

Murdered Her After Assault.

After the assault, while she was prostrate, he held her with his hands and knees, and, taking his knife from his pocket, cut her throat from ear to ear, causing instant death. He then walked to the negro who had been fishing on the bridge and who was thoroughly frightened and asked him what he should do with the body. He was told to leave it where it was, but, unheedful of this request, he took the bleeding form in his arms and carried it back to the swamp, threw it down and escaped into the interior of the swamp. In a few minutes the crime had been reported and in less than an hour practically the entire city was in arms and a well-armed posse was moving in every direction in search of the criminal. Bloodhounds were secured and all night Tuesday a fruitless search was continued.

Negroes Captured Brute.

About noon Wednesday a courier arrived announcing that the negro had been captured by two other negroes about three miles south of the city. Posses were immediately on the trail, but the capturers evaded detection and succeeded in getting their prisoner quickly into the city and in turning him over to the sheriff of Polk county. In less than 10 minutes after the transfer had been made the streets became congested with people, and the crowd, augmented as it marched, moved on the jail. In spite of the sheriff and a strong guard of extra deputies, who made every effort to protect him from mob violence, they secured the prisoner and took up the march to the scene of the crime. He was half dragged, half carried to the bridge, enveloped by a great throng of people, who were resolute and determined, but quiet and orderly. Scream after scream broke from the wretch's quivering lips, followed by groans and prayers for mercy.

Burning at Stake the Penalty.

The stake was the only suggestion as to the proper expiation of the crime, and without organized effort, and yet with apparently unanimous understanding, a barrel was in readiness and was placed by the stake on the very spot where Mrs. Taggart was assaulted and murdered.

On this the negro was placed and chained to the stake. He pleaded for mercy, but in the great crowd around him silence was the only response. There were no jeers, no swearing, no disorder. Before the chains around his body had been made fast, cans of kerosene oil from many sources were passed to the front, and one of the leaders stepped to the negro and slowly but deliberately poured it upon him and his clothes until clothes and barrel were well saturated. It was then about 6 o'clock in the evening. The crowd was growing and business in the city had practically been suspended.

Match Was Applied.

When the match was applied the blaze quickly leaped skyward. The burning body could be seen only as a dark object in the circle of a roaring flame. Then the fire slackened and the writhing body came back in full view, but already the groans had ceased, and the only evidence of life was in the contortions of the muscles of the limbs. For about 15 minutes the body burned and in about a half hour from the time of the application of the match only the charred bones were left.

Close Resemblance.

Mrs. Talkso's husband was reading an advertisement which asserted that "the mail is quick, the telegrapher is quicker, but the telephone is quickest, and you don't have to wait for an answer."

"Ah," he reflected, "in one particular that reminds me strongly of Mrs. Talkso."—Baltimore American.

HOME AGAIN TODAY.

MRS. M'KINLEY REACHING LONG JOURNEY'S END.

Visit of Her Sister and Niece at Canton, Cheered Her—Ohioans Enthusiastic.

Washington, May 30.—The president and Mrs. McKinley are due here this morning.

Pittsburg, May 30.—The last of the day of the homeward journey of the presidential party was a ride across the president's native state of Ohio. Only four stops were made, the longest at Canton, the president's home town, where the train remained for 20 minutes to give Mrs. McKinley an opportunity to see her sister, Mrs. M. C. Barber, and her niece, Miss Ida Barber. Quite a number of the president's old friends and neighbors were at the station and they were overjoyed to learn from the president's own lips that Mrs. McKinley's improvement had continued slowly, but steadily. Judge Day, the former secretary of state; John C. Deuber, Judge Baldwin and Mayor Robertson came aboard the Olympia, but did not see Mrs. McKinley. Her sister was with her until the train left, and her neice remained aboard. The latter will go to Washington, and, with her sister, Miss Mary Barber, who accompanied the party to the Pacific coast, will be the guest of Mrs. McKinley at the white house until she is able to return to Canton.

Many of the stations along the line of the road through Ohio were decorated with American flags. At Lima, the first stop in the state, the school children were given a half holiday to permit them to go to the depot to see the president.

Mrs. McKinley had a very comfortable day. It had been raining in Ohio for several days and there was no dust or heat to make the journey oppressive. The brief visit with her sister at Canton seemed to brighten her spirits and doubtless did her much good. The train arrived at Pittsburg about 7:35 p. m.

Additional Activity Noted In Market Wednesday—Profit Taking In Some Stocks.

New York, May 30.—There was additional activity in the market Wednesday and considerable strength and variety, but the dealings were still evidently in large part professional and the points of strength were somewhat scattered. It was noticeable also that profit taking was going on in stocks which have recently advanced under cover of the new points of strength. Thus, while Atchison, Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific and the Southern railway stocks were moving upward Wednesday, the Tobacco stocks, Lackawanna, the Wabash stocks, Erie and American Car were held back, although much less active than during the time of their recent advance. The strength shown during the day seemed to be largely due to special causes, but the favorable progress made in the London stock exchange settlement and the hope that its completion will clear the way for a growth of confidence was a favoring factor. Something was made of the absence of Northern Pacific convertible bonds, as indicating a prospect of a settlement of the Northern Pacific dispute.

Union Pacific stock did not move decisively, although it recovered well from a period of weakness without holding the entire recovery. April net earnings were an element in the strength of a number of stocks, and were supplemented by other explanations, posibly to further a speculative movement. Atchison's statement, published previously, was a continuing influence. The advance in Pennsylvania was made to appear in sympathy with a revival of the old rumors of a union in retaliation for the project of a Wabash trunk line outlet. The halt in the upward movement of Wabash and Lackawanna may have been significant in the same connection. Southern Pacific presented a very strong statement of net earnings, and Southern railway, Union Pacific and St. Louis and San Francisco also made good showings for April. There were, besides, rumors that announcement would soon be made of large Pennsylvania holdings in Southern railway and that the Chicago, Indianapolis and Louisville has passed to the control of the Southern railway. Reports were current that Union Pacific was extending its holdings of Southern Pacific so as to secure absolute control. The extra dividend on Minneapolis and St. Louis accounts for the strength of that stock. Pacific Mail's rise was in sympathy with Southern Pacific. The rise in Denver and Rio Grande was unexplained. The unfavorable features of the government's weekly crop report and the unexpectedly large gold exports were ignored. Gold engagements ran up at one time to $4,650,000. They were later reduced to $3,950,000 to comply with insurance requirements.

There was some irregularity in the bond market on a fair volume of dealings. Total sales, par value, $2,775,000.

Suit Against Mrs. Eddy.

Boston, May 30.—The jury trial of the suit of Mrs. Josephine A. Woodbury, of this city, claiming $150,000 damages from Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, of Concord, N. H., founder of the Christian Scientist sect, for libel, was begun in the Suffolk county superior court here.

The Resin Eaters.

"Resin eating," said a south Georgia doctor, "is a habit acquired by the Cracker settlers who live in the neighborhood of a turpentine still. The resin they use isn't the hard, shiny resin of commerce, but has been dipped out of the cooking caldron at an early stage of the process, and when it cools it can be kneaded between the fingers like wax. The backwoods resin eater will bite off an immense chunk and chew it placidly until it disappears. The heat of the mouth keeps it fairly soft, but if the chewing becomes too deliberate it is apt to 'set,' as they say, and cement the victim's jaws together in a grip of iron.

"On one occasion a big, rawboned backwoodsman who used to hang around a still I operated came rushing into my little office, clutching his face in both hands and making a horrible gurgling noise in his throat. 'What on earth is the matter?' I asked in alarm. 'His rosum's sot,' said another Cracker, who brought up the rear. I was nonplused at first, but finally grasped the fact that the man had been chewing a monstrous slab of resin and had thoughtlessly suspended operations long enough to allow it to solidify and clamp his teeth like a vice. We finally pried his mouth open with a chisel and broke a couple of molars in the operation. Next day I saw him chewing again."—Exchange.

The Torture of a Flax Shirt.

The most trying ordeal that Booker T. Washington was forced to endure as a slave boy was the wearing of a flax shirt. In his autobiography, "Up From Slavery," he says:

"In the portion of Virginia where I lived it was common to use flax as part of the clothing for slaves. That part of the flax from which our clothing was made was largely the refuse, which of course was the cheapest and roughest part. I can scarcely imagine any torture except perhaps the pulling of a tooth that is equal to that caused by pulling on a new flax shirt for the first time. It is almost equal to the feeling that one would experience if he had a dozen or more chestnut burs or a hundred small pin points in contact with the flesh. Even to this day I can recall accurately the tortures that I underwent when pulling on one of these garments. The fact that my flesh was soft and tender added to the pain. But I had no choice. I had to wear the flax shirt or none, and had it been left to me to choose I should have chosen to wear no covering.

"In connection with the flax shirt my brother John, who is several years older than I am, performed one of the most generous acts that I ever heard of one slave relative doing for another. On several occasions when I was being forced to wear a new flax shirt he generously agreed to put it on in my stead and wear it for several days till it was 'broken in.' Until I had grown to be quite a youth this single garment was all that I wore."

BRUTE CREMATED.

Fearful Punishment For An Awful Crime, In Florida.

WHITE WOMAN NEGRO'S VICTIM.

Bartow, Fla., May 30.—Fred Rochelle, a negro, 35 years of age, who criminally assaulted and then murdered Mrs. Rena Taggart, a well-known and respected white woman, of this city, was burned at the stake here.

Negro Assaulted His Victim.

Mrs. Taggart, who was born and reared in this place, and was a woman of good family and reputation, went fishing alone in a small row boat that she kept at the city bridge over Piaco creek. This is in full view of the public thoroughfare. A few minutes before noon, desiring to return home, she rowed her boat to the bridge and made it fast. A negro man was fishing from the bridge at the time. Mrs. Taggart started home and had proceeded only a few steps in the swamp toward the open prairie and thence to the street, when she was approached by Rochelle, who had been hiding in the swamp. He seized her and she broke loose, and, screaming, ran from the swamp into the prairie, where he overtook her.

Murdered Her After Assault.

After the assault, while she was prostrate, he held her with his hands and knees, and, taking his knife from his pocket, cut her throat from ear to ear, causing instant death. He then walked to the negro who had been fishing on the bridge and who was thoroughly frightened and asked him what he should do with the body. He was told to leave it where it was, but, unheedful of this request, he took the bleeding form in his arms and carried it back to the swamp, threw it down and escaped into the interior of the swamp. In a few minutes the crime had been reported and in less than an hour practically the entire city was in arms and a well-armed posse was moving in every direction in search of the criminal. Bloodhounds were secured and all night Tuesday a fruitless search was continued.

Negroes Captured Brute.

About noon Wednesday a courier arrived announcing that the negro had been captured by two other negroes about three miles south of the city. Posses were immediately on the trail, but the capturers evaded detection and succeeded in getting their prisoner quickly into the city and in turning him over to the sheriff of Polk county. In less than 10 minutes after the transfer had been made the streets became congested with people, and the crowd, augmented as it marched, moved on the jail. In spite of the sheriff and a strong guard of extra deputies, who made every effort to protect him from mob violence, they secured the prisoner and took up the march to the scene of the crime. He was half dragged, half carried to the bridge, enveloped by a great throng of people, who were resolute and determined, but quiet and orderly. Scream after scream broke from the wretch's quivering lips, followed by groans and prayers for mercy.

Burning at Stake the Penalty.

The stake was the only suggestion as to the proper expiation of the crime, and without organized effort, and yet with apparently unanimous understanding, a barrel was in readiness and was placed by the stake on the very spot where Mrs. Taggart was assaulted and murdered.

On this the negro was placed and chained to the stake. He pleaded for mercy, but in the great crowd around him silence was the only response. There were no jeers, no swearing, no disorder. Before the chains around his body had been made fast, cans of kerosene oil from many sources were passed to the front, and one of the leaders stepped to the negro and slowly but deliberately poured it upon him and his clothes until clothes and barrel were well saturated. It was then about 6 o'clock in the evening. The crowd was growing and business in the city had practically been suspended.

Match Was Applied.

When the match was applied the blaze quickly leaped skyward. The burning body could be seen only as a dark object in the circle of a roaring flame. Then the fire slackened and the writhing body came back in full view, but already the groans had ceased, and the only evidence of life was in the contortions of the muscles of the limbs. For about 15 minutes the body burned and in about a half hour from the time of the application of the match only the charred bones were left.

Close Resemblance.

Mrs. Talkso's husband was reading an advertisement which asserted that "the mail is quick, the telegrapher is quicker, but the telephone is quickest, and you don't have to wait for an answer."

"Ah," he reflected, "in one particular that reminds me strongly of Mrs. Talkso."—Baltimore American.

HOME AGAIN TODAY.

MRS. M'KINLEY REACHING LONG JOURNEY'S END.

Visit of Her Sister and Niece at Canton, Cheered Her—Ohioans Enthusiastic.

Washington, May 30.—The president and Mrs. McKinley are due here this morning.

Pittsburg, May 30.—The last of the day of the homeward journey of the presidential party was a ride across the president's native state of Ohio. Only four stops were made, the longest at Canton, the president's home town, where the train remained for 20 minutes to give Mrs. McKinley an opportunity to see her sister, Mrs. M. C. Barber, and her niece, Miss Ida Barber. Quite a number of the president's old friends and neighbors were at the station and they were overjoyed to learn from the president's own lips that Mrs. McKinley's improvement had continued slowly, but steadily. Judge Day, the former secretary of state; John C. Deuber, Judge Baldwin and Mayor Robertson came aboard the Olympia, but did not see Mrs. McKinley. Her sister was with her until the train left, and her neice remained aboard. The latter will go to Washington, and, with her sister, Miss Mary Barber, who accompanied the party to the Pacific coast, will be the guest of Mrs. McKinley at the white house until she is able to return to Canton.

Many of the stations along the line of the road through Ohio were decorated with American flags. At Lima, the first stop in the state, the school children were given a half holiday to permit them to go to the depot to see the president.

Mrs. McKinley had a very comfortable day. It had been raining in Ohio for several days and there was no dust or heat to make the journey oppressive. The brief visit with her sister at Canton seemed to brighten her spirits and doubtless did her much good. The train arrived at Pittsburg about 7:35 p. m.

Additional Activity Noted In Market Wednesday—Profit Taking In Some Stocks.

New York, May 30.—There was additional activity in the market Wednesday and considerable strength and variety, but the dealings were still evidently in large part professional and the points of strength were somewhat scattered. It was noticeable also that profit taking was going on in stocks which have recently advanced under cover of the new points of strength. Thus, while Atchison, Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific and the Southern railway stocks were moving upward Wednesday, the Tobacco stocks, Lackawanna, the Wabash stocks, Erie and American Car were held back, although much less active than during the time of their recent advance. The strength shown during the day seemed to be largely due to special causes, but the favorable progress made in the London stock exchange settlement and the hope that its completion will clear the way for a growth of confidence was a favoring factor. Something was made of the absence of Northern Pacific convertible bonds, as indicating a prospect of a settlement of the Northern Pacific dispute.

Union Pacific stock did not move decisively, although it recovered well from a period of weakness without holding the entire recovery. April net earnings were an element in the strength of a number of stocks, and were supplemented by other explanations, posibly to further a speculative movement. Atchison's statement, published previously, was a continuing influence. The advance in Pennsylvania was made to appear in sympathy with a revival of the old rumors of a union in retaliation for the project of a Wabash trunk line outlet. The halt in the upward movement of Wabash and Lackawanna may have been significant in the same connection. Southern Pacific presented a very strong statement of net earnings, and Southern railway, Union Pacific and St. Louis and San Francisco also made good showings for April. There were, besides, rumors that announcement would soon be made of large Pennsylvania holdings in Southern railway and that the Chicago, Indianapolis and Louisville has passed to the control of the Southern railway. Reports were current that Union Pacific was extending its holdings of Southern Pacific so as to secure absolute control. The extra dividend on Minneapolis and St. Louis accounts for the strength of that stock. Pacific Mail's rise was in sympathy with Southern Pacific. The rise in Denver and Rio Grande was unexplained. The unfavorable features of the government's weekly crop report and the unexpectedly large gold exports were ignored. Gold engagements ran up at one time to $4,650,000. They were later reduced to $3,950,000 to comply with insurance requirements.

There was some irregularity in the bond market on a fair volume of dealings. Total sales, par value, $2,775,000.

Suit Against Mrs. Eddy.

Boston, May 30.—The jury trial of the suit of Mrs. Josephine A. Woodbury, of this city, claiming $150,000 damages from Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, of Concord, N. H., founder of the Christian Scientist sect, for libel, was begun in the Suffolk county superior court here.

The Resin Eaters.

"Resin eating," said a south Georgia doctor, "is a habit acquired by the Cracker settlers who live in the neighborhood of a turpentine still. The resin they use isn't the hard, shiny resin of commerce, but has been dipped out of the cooking caldron at an early stage of the process, and when it cools it can be kneaded between the fingers like wax. The backwoods resin eater will bite off an immense chunk and chew it placidly until it disappears. The heat of the mouth keeps it fairly soft, but if the chewing becomes too deliberate it is apt to 'set,' as they say, and cement the victim's jaws together in a grip of iron.

"On one occasion a big, rawboned backwoodsman who used to hang around a still I operated came rushing into my little office, clutching his face in both hands and making a horrible gurgling noise in his throat. 'What on earth is the matter?' I asked in alarm. 'His rosum's sot,' said another Cracker, who brought up the rear. I was nonplused at first, but finally grasped the fact that the man had been chewing a monstrous slab of resin and had thoughtlessly suspended operations long enough to allow it to solidify and clamp his teeth like a vice. We finally pried his mouth open with a chisel and broke a couple of molars in the operation. Next day I saw him chewing again."—Exchange.

learned concerning the propositions which Mr. Travis will bring up before the board, it is positively known that a Boston shoe manufacturer and a Cleveland party, who is at the head of an extensive bicycle factory, have been in communication with the officials of the board with a view of locating here. A Birmingham iron manufacturer has also made inquiries which have given rise to the belief he is favorably impressed with the city and may be induced to come here.

Whether or not any of the three parties last mentioned have any connection with the propositions now in the hands of Mr. Travis cannot be conjectured. Nevertheless there is "something going to drop" tomorrow night and there will doubtless be a large gathering at the meeting to help boost the projects.

A GENERATION AFTER;

Or,

A Luzon Memorial Day.

By Joseph A. Altsheler.

Copyright, 1901, by Joseph A. Altsheler.

THE third soldier on the left was gray and old. His hair was short and thin, and his face was seamed by a thousand little wrinkles, crossing each other in a fine network. But there was nothing decrepit about his figure, which was spare, nervous and strong like that of an athlete. Even when he lay at rest his muscles were drawn and ready like those of a panther about to spring. He wore a faded uniform, and every line and angle about him marked the American regular soldier, alert and self reliant.

On their right lay a little village of huts, now lone and deserted, and from the dense tropical jungle on their left came the sound of the enemy's trumpet. The old soldier turned a little farther over on his side, and, taking from his pocket a twist of tobacco, cut off a piece with his clasp knife and offered it to the young man beside him. When the youth declined it, the regular shook his head gravely and said:

"You make a mistake, Jarvis. Tobacco is good for a soldier's nerves, and when he can't get anything to eat it's a wonderful sustainer of strength."

Then he put the piece in his own mouth and chewed with great composure and satisfaction.

The note of the trumpet, faint and far, came again, but the regular took no notice until the youth shifted restlessly and attempted to peer over a clump of thorn bushes in the direction of the sound. Then he laid two strong hands upon his comrade's blouse and quietly pulled him down.

"Don't do that," he said without anger, "because a Mauser bullet might come along, and then Private Jarvis of the Fourth infantry would need no more rations. You see, it wouldn't be fair to the government, which has fed you and clothed and paid you to waste your life in such a manner."

"I don't like this sort of war," said Private Jarvis impatiently. "Half the time I'm floundering in a thorn bush, and the other half I'm in the black mud of a swamp up to my waist, while the enemy is sneaking through the bushes with his Mauser ready to pot us."

"That's so," replied the regular. "War ain't a picnic anywhere, least of all here, where it's so hot and you've got to find the enemy and then catch him and hold him before you can lick him. Now, it was hot down there in Cuba when we went up the hill at San Juan, with the Spaniards blazing away at us like mad, but the Spaniard when he got his licking took it and quit, and then we became good friends. Now, here"—

He stopped suddenly. They heard far off in the jungle the sound of a crackling rifle fire.

"It's our skirmishers driving the enemy back on his earthworks," said the regular. "They're clearing the bush—doing the light work. The heavy job's got to wait, and we're not wanted yet. It's slow work, this lying here in the sun. I wonder what they are doing back in the States."

The boy Jarvis was silent for a moment, and then his eyes gleamed.

"I know what they are doing—at least in my part of the country," he said. "Don't you know what day this is, Wilson?"

The regular shook his head.

"How do you expect a fellow to keep track of time," he said, "when for days and days he's been following the little brown men in a Luzon jungle? We don't have a chance to rest and sleep, much less trying to think what day of the week it is."

"But I remember," said Jarvis. "It's the 30th of May, and it's Decoration day, the day when we remember those who fell in the civil war. Say, Wilson, over there in my home, way up in old York state by Lake Ontario, all the women are out today putting flowers on the graves of the old soldiers. The pretty girls are along, too, God bless 'em! I can see their blue eyes and brown hair and red cheeks now. It isn't so sad, you know; that war was such a long time ago that all the sting of it has passed. It was fought before I was born, and we just feel that they were all heroes together. We glory in 'em, and the grief is gone. You know how it is, Wilson?"

"Yes, I know how it is," replied the regular.

There was a sudden increase in the firing of the skirmishers and Wilson appeared to be listening intently, but his thoughts were far away and in a time long past. His face was too brown and seamed to show emotion, but there was a faint suspicion of a mist in his eyes.

"Yes, I know how it is, Jarvis," he repeated, "but you see I was on the other side, and I ain't got any cause to be ashamed of it. We thought we were right and your people thought they were right, and with only that little difference of opinion between us we made the grandest fight of it the world has ever seen. Well, it was over long ago, and those that were in it ain't got any bitter feeling toward each other. It's right that the northern people should decorate the graves of the men who fell, and in the south we do the same. Hark to that trumpet! They are still gathering. They know that we'll charge 'em pretty quick. Just as soon as our skirmishers and cavalry turn their left flank, it'll be up and at 'em."

Soft, but mellow and clear, the note of the trumpet once more came through the jungle across the marsh. The fire of the skirmishers swelled into a steady crackle.

"That trumpet is a signal," said the regular, "and it's like another but bigger signal that I heard a long time ago. Hear those shots over there? The cavalry are on their flanks now. We haven't got much longer to wait; then we'll swing forward as we did that day up Cemetery hill, but to a luckier end."

"It was hot then?" said the youth tentatively.

The regular laughed quietly.

"Hot?" he said. "Hot was no name for it. It was the road to the infernal regions. I'm a Virginian, Jarvis, and I was with Pickett. I was no older then than you are now. We were lying down on Seminary ridge, facing the Yankees on Cemetery hill and biding our time. We had been fighting there nearly three days, you know, Jarvis, but we, under Pickett, did not come up until the last day. Do you see any of 'em, Jarvis?"

"No. The skirmishers are still lively, but I don't see anything."

"It's still too early for us. There had been a tremendous fire of big guns, about 300 of 'em altogether, for an hour or two, and then they stopped all of a sudden. It was so still that you could hear an ant crawl. Then came the signal for us with Pickett to charge home to the heart of the northern army, and we did it. I say we did it, but we didn't come back—at least not many of us. It was about a mile across the open, and there were less than 5,000 of us going against the Yankee army of 60,000 or 80,000 men, though if it had been the other way I guess the Yankees would have done the same. That was the hottest and liveliest march, Jarvis, that 5,000 men ever made. They began blazing at us at once with the big guns on Cemetery hill and from the batteries that covered the hill called Little Round Top, and the bullets and the shells lashed us through and through. Hasn't that firing come a little nearer, Jarvis?"

"Yes. I can see two of our skirmishers crawling through the bush."

"All right, let 'em work; it's their time, and ours hasn't come. When we got across that valley, Jarvis, there weren't many of us left, but we went on all the same, and then the rifles began on us, 50,000 or 60,000 of 'em, but then they looked to me like a million. I couldn't see anything but black smoke and red flame, and as I went on I stumbled over the bodies of my comrades. Even now, Jarvis, I sometimes hear in my ears the roaring of all those cannon and rifles. Now and then when the smoke was driven aside by the blaze of the great guns we could see the northern batteries, and we kept straight toward 'em. We haven't much longer to wait now, Jarvis. There's the colonel across yonder, and he's drawing his belt a little tighter. That means that the charge is coming, and he'll lead it himself."

"I don't hear the trumpet any more, Wilson."

"No, it's sung its song for the day. The enemy are crawling into the earthworks now. As I told you, Jarvis, we went on up the hill and into the mouths of the Yankee guns. Oh, they were there all right enough waiting for us, and I don't remember much that happened then except a roar and a blaze and yells as if a million devils were shouting at once. All of our men who were left were killed or taken, and I fell down with one bullet through my leg and another through my shoulder."

"You were taken prisoner, Wilson?"

"Of course. When the battle was over, a tall young fellow with blue eyes and brown hair, just about as old as you are now, lifted me up and carried me into the Yankee camp. He brought me a doctor and until I got well he waited on me same as if he had been my brother. That was a curious young fellow, Jarvis—at least I thought so then, but not now perhaps. He didn't seem to have any malice toward us of the south, though he was fighting us with all his might. He had got a little wound himself in the charge, just enough to put him off active duty, but not enough to keep him from helping me. It was then that I began to find out that the Yankees were the same sort of men under the skin that we were. We'd argue the question of the war in the most peaceful way, just like two preachers. Then he'd tell me about his home way up north, and I'd tell him about mine way down south. Hark to that, Jarvis! The fight's swinging close."

The fire of the skirmishers grew fiercer. To the ears of the listening men came the occasional shout of the combatants. Overhead a coppery sun sailed in a sky of cloudless blue, and the air became closer and hotter. The deserted huts in the village looked like emblems of desolation. Everything betokened the coming conflict.

"Well, the Yankee nursed me for near a month," resumed the regular, "and I suppose that I owe my life to him—at least I feel that way. We must have had a hundred arguments about the war, and I never could convert him, and he never could convert me, but we didn't worry about that when we parted. I've never forgot, Jarvis, what that Yankee did for me, and it's one reason why when the war was over I concluded that as I had been fighting against Uncle Sam for four years I ought to fight for him awhile, and as a matter of fact I've been fighting for him ever since—years and years against the Indians out west and then against the Spaniards in Cuba. Take a last look at your Krag, Jarvis. We ain't got more'n two minutes left now."

A low murmur accompanied by a gentle click of metal arose around them. It was the men gathering themselves for the charge and moving their rifles softly. The fire of the skirmishers died, and the stillness of expectation took its place.

"Did you know the name of the man who nursed you at Gettysburg, Wilson?" whispered Jarvis.

"Of course I did," replied Wilson. "His name was Philip Jarvis, and he lived at a little place called Hometown, away up in New York state, on lake Ontario."

"Why, that was my father!" said the youth.

"Of course it was," replied the regular, "and I've known it all the while. I knew it the first time I saw you, and that was why I took up with you. It was why I took the trouble to save your life at least a half dozen times here, for you were young, Jarvis, and you didn't know much about soldiering when you came. And it's why, too, boy, if I were back there with you today I'd help you decorate all them Yankee graves. Steady now, Jarvis, and we'll go together into the earthwork."

"Forward, men! Charge!" cried the colonel in a voice like the snap of a pistol shot.

"Now, lad, up and at 'em!" said Wilson in the ear of his comrade.

Street Car Bills to Be Quickly Crowded Through In Pennsylvania Senate.

Harrisburg, May 30.—There was introduced in the senate Wednesday afternoon a bill which will give corporations the right to construct either underground or elevated railroads in cities, boroughs and townships, and a bill which will give to street railway companies considerable more power than they now possess.

They were introduced by Mr. Focht, of Union, and Mr. Emery, of Mercer. Both senators are identified with the dominant faction of the Republican party in the state. Immediately after the bills were introduced they were referred to the judiciary special committee, and about 10 minutes later they were favorably reported to the senate, one by Mr. Sproul, of Chester, and the other by Mr. Grady, of Philadelphia. It was rumored around the capitol that it was the intention to have the bills read first time last night, second time today and passed finally in the senate on Friday morning. This, however, could not be verified.

One amendment in the Emory bill will give to a new company the right to use Broad street, Philadelphia, over the use of which there has been considerable contention in recent years.

Beyond the introduction of the Philadelphia railway bills and the reporting from committees of several measures, little was done, and adjournment was taken until 9 o'clock last night.

The senate immediately took up the consideration of bills on the first reading calendar when it reconvened last night. Among the bills read and passed were the two railroad bills introduced in the afternoon. The Focht bill was previously recommitted and some of the phraseology amended and some minor changes made. Unless the present program is changed both bills will be passed finally on Friday and will be messaged to the house Monday afternoon. The two bills have attracted more attention than any other bills, with the exception of the "rippers."

A bill introduced by Mr. Heinle, of Centre, Wednesday afternoon, which appropriates $10,000 for the erection of a statue of A. G. Curtin, Pennsylvania's Civil War governor, at Bellefonte, was favorably reported from committee and passed first reading last night.

The senate adjourned until tonight so that senators can have the opportunity of attending the Memorial day exercises at Gettysburg.

Among the senate bills passed finally in the house was this one:

Providing for a submission to a popular vote at the next general election the proposed constitutional amendment for personal registration in cities.

Among the bills reported from the appropriations committee were these:

State normal schools, $260,000; Altoona hospital, $15,000; Bradford hospital, $19,000; Ladies' G. A. R. Home, $15,000; Clearfield hospital, $4,000; Home of Colored Women, $8,000; Dubois hospital, $3,000.

House adjourned until 4 p. m. Monday.

Her brother, Pabst, is badly injured, and the father, Charles Whipple, is badly injured. The accident occurred at a blind crossing and the wagon was not seen until too late to stop the train. The wagon was completely wrecked, but the horses escaped injury.

Scales Fell on Him and William Clay Was Painfully Injured.

William Clay had his left leg injured yesterday morning while endeavoring to jump off a car in the West End. A GENERATION AFTER;

Or,

A Luzon Memorial Day.

By Joseph A. Altsheler.

Copyright, 1901, by Joseph A. Altsheler.

THE third soldier on the left was gray and old. His hair was short and thin, and his face was seamed by a thousand little wrinkles, crossing each other in a fine network. But there was nothing decrepit about his figure, which was spare, nervous and strong like that of an athlete. Even when he lay at rest his muscles were drawn and ready like those of a panther about to spring. He wore a faded uniform, and every line and angle about him marked the American regular soldier, alert and self reliant.

On their right lay a little village of huts, now lone and deserted, and from the dense tropical jungle on their left came the sound of the enemy's trumpet. The old soldier turned a little farther over on his side and, taking from his pocket a twist of tobacco, cut off a piece with his clasp knife and offered it to the young man beside him. When the youth declined it, the regular shook his head gravely and said:

"You make a mistáke, Jarvis. Tobacco is good for a soldier's nerves, and when he can't get anything to eat it's a wonderful sustainer of strength."

Then he put the piece in his own mouth and chewed with great composure and satisfaction.

The note of the trumpet, faint and far, came again, but the regular took no notice until the youth shifted restlessly and attempted to peer over a clump of thorn bushes in the direction of the sound. Then he laid two strong hands upon his comrade's blouse and quietly pulled him down.

"Don't do that," he said without anger, "because a Mauser bullet might come along, and then Private Jarvis of the Fourth infantry would need no more rations. You see, it wouldn't be fair to the government, which has fed you and clothed and paid you to waste your life in such a manner."

"I don't like this sort of war," said Private Jarvis impatiently. "Half the time I'm floundering in a thorn bush, and the other half I'm in the black mud of a swamp up to my waist, while the enemy is sneaking through the bushes with his Mauser ready to pot us."

"That's so," replied the regular. "War ain't a picnic anywhere, least of all here, where it's so hot and you've got to find the enemy and then catch him and hold him before you can lick him. Now, it was hot down there in Cuba when we went up the hill at San Juan, with the Spaniards blazing away at us like mad, but the Spaniard when he got his licking took it and quit, and then we became good friends. Now, here"—

He stopped suddenly. They heard far off in the jungle the sound of a crackling rifle fire.

"It's our skirmishers driving the enemy back on his earthworks," said the regular. "They're clearing the bush—doing the light work. The heavy job's got to wait, and we're not wanted yet. It's slow work, this lying here in the sun. I wonder what they are doing back in the States."

The boy Jarvis was silent for a moment, and then his eyes gleamed.

"I know what they are doing—at least in my part of the country," he said. "Don't you know what day this is, Wilson?"

The regular shook his head.

"How do you expect a fellow to keep track of time," he said, "when for days and days he's been following the little brown men in a Luzon jungle? We don't have a chance to rest and sleep, much less trying to think what day of the week it is."

"But I remember," said Jarvis. "It's the 30th of May, and it's Decoration day, the day when we remember those who fell in the civil war. Say, Wilson, over there in my home, way up in old York state by Lake Ontario, all the women are out today putting flowers on the graves of the old soldiers. The pretty girls are along, too, God bless 'em! I can see their blue eyes and brown hair and red cheeks now. It isn't so sad, you know; that war was such a long time ago that all the sting of it has passed. It was fought before I was born, and we just feel that they were all heroes together. We glory in 'em, and the grief is gone. You know how it is, Wilson?"

"Yes, I know how it is," replied the regular.

There was a sudden increase in the firing of the skirmishers and Wilson appeared to be listening intently, but his thoughts were far away and in a time long past. His face was too brown and seamed to show emotion, but there was a faint suspicion of a mist in his eyes.

"Yes, I know how it is, Jarvis," he repeated, "but you see I was on the other side, and I ain't got any cause to be ashamed of it. We thought we were right and your people thought they were right, and with only that little difference of opinion between us we made the grandest fight of it the world has ever seen. Well, it was over long ago, and those that were in it ain't got any bitter feeling toward each other. It's right that the northern people should decorate the graves of the men who fell, and in the south we do the same. Hark to that trumpet! They are still gathering. They know that we'll charge 'em pretty quick. Just as soon as our skirmishers and cavalry turn their left flank, it'll be up and at 'em."

Soft, but mellow and clear, the note of the trumpet once more came through the jungle across the marsh. The fire of the skirmishers swelled into a steady crackle.

"That trumpet is a signal," said the regular, "and it's like another but bigger signal that I heard a long time ago. Hear those shots over there? The cavalry are on their flanks now. We haven't got much longer to wait; then we'll swing forward as we did that day up Cemetery hill, but to a luckier end."

"It was hot then?" said the youth tentatively.

The regular laughed quietly.

"Hot?" he said. "Hot was no name for it. It was the road to the infernal regions. I'm a Virginian, Jarvis, and I was with Pickett. I was no older then than you are now. We were lying down on Seminary ridge, facing the Yankees on Cemetery hill and biding our time. We had been fighting there nearly three days, you know, Jarvis, but we, under Pickett, did not come up until the last day. Do you see any of 'em, Jarvis?"

"No. The skirmishers are still lively, but I don't see anything."

"It's still too early for us. There had been a tremendous fire of big guns, about 300 of 'em altogether, for an hour or two, and then they stopped all of a sudden. It was so still that you could hear an ant crawl. Then came the signal for us with Pickett to charge home to the heart of the northern army, and we did it. I say we did it, but we didn't come back—at least not many of us. It was about a mile across the open, and there were less than 5,000 of us going against the Yankee army of 60,000 or 80,000 men, though if it had been the other way I guess the Yankees would have done the same. That was the hottest and liveliest march, Jarvis, that 5,000 men ever made. They began blazing at us at once with the big guns on Cemetery hill and from the batteries that covered the hill called Little Round Top, and the bullets and the shells lashed us through and through. Hasn't that firing come a little nearer, Jarvis?"

"Yes. I can see two of our skirmishers crawling through the bush."

"All right, let 'em work; it's their time, and ours hasn't come. When we got across that valley, Jarvis, there weren't many of us left, but we went on all the same, and then the rifles began on us, 50,000 or 60,000 of 'em, but then they looked to me like a million. I couldn't see anything but black smoke and red flame, and as I went on I stumbled over the bodies of my comrades. Even now, Jarvis, I sometimes hear in my ears the roaring of all those cannon and rifles. Now and then when the smoke was driven aside by the blaze of the great guns we could see the northern batteries, and we kept straight toward 'em. We haven't much longer to wait now, Jarvis. There's the colonel across yonder, and he's drawing his belt a little tighter. That means that the charge is coming, and he'll lead it himself."

"I don't hear the trumpet any more, Wilson."

"No, it's sung its song for the day. The enemy are crawling into the earthworks now. As I told you, Jarvis, we went on up the hill and into the mouths of the Yankee guns. Oh, they were there all right enough waiting for us, and I don't remember much that happened then except a roar and a blaze and yells as if a million devils were shouting at once. All of our men who were left were killed or taken, and I fell down with one bullet through my leg and another through my shoulder."

"You were taken prisoner, Wilson?"

"Of course. When the battle was over, a tall young fellow with blue eyes and brown hair, just about as old as you are now, lifted me up and carried me into the Yankee camp. He brought me a doctor and until I got well he waited on me same as if he had been my brother. That was a curious young fellow, Jarvis—at least I thought so then, but not now perhaps. He didn't seem to have any malice toward us of the south, though he was fighting us with all his might. He had got a little wound himself in the charge, just enough to put him off active duty, but not enough to keep him from helping me. It was then that I began to find out that the Yankees were the same sort of men under the skin that we were. We'd argue the question of the war in the most peaceful way, just like two preachers. Then he'd tell me about his home way up north, and I'd tell him about mine way down south. Hark to that, Jarvis! The fight's swinging close."

The fire of the skirmishers grew fiercer. To the ears of the listening men came the occasional shout of the combatants. Overhead a coppery sun sailed in a sky of cloudless blue, and the air became closer and hotter. The deserted huts in the village looked like emblems of desolation. Everything betokened the coming conflict.

"Well, the Yankee nursed me for near a month," resumed the regular, "and I suppose that I owe my life to him—at least I feel that way. We must have had a hundred arguments about the war, and I never could convert him, and he never could convert me, but we didn't worry about that when we parted. I've never forgot, Jarvis, what that Yankee did for me, and it's one reason why when the war was over I concluded that as I had been fighting against Uncle Sam for four years I ought to fight for him awhile, and as a matter of fact I've been fighting for him ever since—years and years against the Indians out west and then against the Spaniards in Cuba. Take a last look at your Krag, Jarvis. We ain't got more'n two minutes left now."

A low murmur accompanied by a gentle click of metal arose around them. It was the men gathering themselves for the charge and moving their rifles softly. The fire of the skirmishers died, and the stillness of expectation took its place.

"Did you know the name of the man who nursed you at Gettysburg, Wilson?" whispered Jarvis.

"Of course I did," replied Wilson. "His name was Philip Jarvis, and he lived at a little place called Hometown, away up in New York state, on lake Ontario."

"Why, that was my father!" said the youth.

"Of course it was," replied the regular, "and I've known it all the while. I knew it the first time I saw you, and that was why I took up with you. It was why I took the trouble to save your life at least a half dozen times here, for you were young, Jarvis, and you didn't know much about soldiering when you came. And it's why, too, boy, if I were back there with you today I'd help you decorate all them Yankee graves. Steady now, Jarvis, and we'll go together into the earthwork."

"Forward, men! Charge!" cried the colonel in a voice like the snap of a pistol shot.

"Now, lad, up and at 'em!" said Wilson in the ear of his comrade.

Street Car Bills to Be Quickly Crowded Through In Pennsylvania Senate.

Harrisburg, May 30.—There was introduced in the senate Wednesday afternoon a bill which will give corporations the right to construct either underground or elevated railroads in cities, boroughs and townships, and a bill which will give to street railway companies considerable more power than they now possess.

They were introduced by Mr. Focht, of Union, and Mr. Emery, of Mercer. Both senators are identified with the dominant faction of the Republican party in the state. Immediately after the bills were introduced they were referred to the judiciary special committee, and about 10 minutes later they were favorably reported to the senate, one by Mr. Sproul, of Chester, and the other by Mr. Grady, of Philadelphia. It was rumored around the capitol that it was the intention to have the bills read first time last night, second time today and passed finally in the senate on Friday morning. This, however, could not be verified.

One amendment in the Emory bill will give to a new company the right to use Broad street, Philadelphia, over the use of which there has been considerable contention in recent years.

Beyond the introduction of the Philadelphia railway bills and the reporting from committees of several measures, little was done, and adjournment was taken until 9 o'clock last night.

The senate immediately took up the consideration of bills on the first reading calendar when it reconvened last night. Among the bills read and passed were the two railroad bills introduced in the afternoon. The Focht bill was previously recommitted and some of the phraseology amended and some minor changes made. Unless the present program is changed both bills will be passed finally on Friday and will be messaged to the house Monday afternoon. The two bills have attracted more attention than any other bills, with the exception of the "rippers."

A bill introduced by Mr. Heinle, of Centre, Wednesday afternoon, which appropriates $10,000 for the erection of a statue of A. G. Curtin, Pennsylvania's Civil War governor, at Bellefonte, was favorably reported from committee and passed first reading last night.

The senate adjourned until tonight so that senators can have the opportunity of attending the Memorial day exercises at Gettysburg.

Among the senate bills passed finally in the house was this one:

Providing for a submission to a popular vote at the next general election the proposed constitutional amendment for personal registration in cities.

Among the bills reported from the appropriations committee were these:

State normal schools, $260,000; Altoona hospital, $15,000; Bradford hospital, $19,000; Ladies' G. A. R. Home, $15,000; Clearfield hospital, $4,000; Home of Colored Women, $8,000; Dubois hospital, $3,000.

House adjourned until 4 p. m. Monday.

Benton Harbor, Mich., May 30.—A passenger train on the Big Four ran into a gypsy wagon south of Niles, killing Ethel Whipple, aged 6. Her brother, Pabst, is badly injured, and the father, Charles Whipple, is badly injured. The accident occurred at a blind crossing and the wagon was not seen until too late to stop the train. The wagon was completely wrecked, but the horses escaped injury.

China Would Have Had to Pay If Delaying Settlement.

THE DRACON THEN YIELDED.

Agreed to Pay Indemnities of 450,000,000 Taels, Equivalent to About $337,000,000, at Present Rate of Exchange.

Washington, May 30.—The department of state has been informed reliably that the Chinese government has issued a decree agreeing to pay an indemnity of 450,000,000 taels, equivalent to about $337,000,000 at the present rate of exchange. It is known now that the whole subject of indemnity will be closed up before the end of the present month. If that is not done and evacuation is not under way on a large scale, then the Chinese government must be assessed $1,000,000 each day after June 1 next, to compensate the powers for the maintenance of their military forces in China. Under this whip the Chinese government has been forced to yield. It is not known that the powers have agreed on the form and extent of guarantee, but now that the amount of indemnity is fixed not much difficulty is expected on this score.

The United States government has not taken part in the selection of a military commandant to succeed Field Marshal Count von Waldersee in the supreme command at Pekin. Having dispensed with our military force in China, the United States is not concerned in the personality of the military chief. Our legation guard will not owe allegiance or obedience to any foreign commander, but will be answerable solely to the United States minister or charge. In the event of common peril the several legation guards may unite for the common defense, in which case they may select their own leader, as they did during the defense of the legationers last year.

AMERICA MAY APPROVE.

Cubans Placed Construction on Platt Amendment, Which Must Be Considered.

Washington, May 30.—Secretary Root has received a cablegram from General Wood, at Havana, briefly confirming the press report of the adoption, by a vote of 15 yeas to 14 nays, the report of the committee on relations with the United States, accepting in behalf of the convention the terms of the Platt amendment. It is not possible at this moment to secure here even an abstract of the resolutions adopted. It is understood that without undertaking materially to change the language of the Platt amendment the convention, by the addition of reports of interviews with Secretary Root and otherwise, has placed upon the amendment itself, a construction that will require very serious consideration.

Secretary Root has been in daily communication by cable with General Wood, and is acquainted with the proceedings of the delegates and the negotiations which led up to this action. General Wood, in turn, has acquainted the constitutional delegates with the secretary's views in answer to their efforts to place a construction upon the Platt amendment. Hence the weight of opinion inclines to the belief that even as it stands the convention's action will not be disapproved from Washington. It is suggested by the officials that there is no occasion at present for the Washington government to take action upon this matter, either by accepting or rejecting the convention's work.

GEORGE D. RISE SUICIDED.

Drank Poison on Train and Died In Station at Lebanon, Pa.

Lebanon, Pa., May 30.—George D. Rise, proprietor of the Lebanon house, 257 West Fourteenth street, New York, committed suicide. He drank a poisonous fluid while on a train from New York bound for this city, and died in the baggage room at Lebanon station. Deceased was a resident of this city for about a quarter of a century or more and held the positions of bank teller and cashier and was well known in banking circles throughout the state.

The following unaddressed and unsigned note was found in his pocket: "I am George D. Rise, of Lebanon Pa. Take me there and send word to my son there, Harry D. Rise, No. 142 North Eighth street. I have lost everything and I scarcely know what I am doing. I have taken cyanide of potassium or pistol to end my troubles. No one to blame but myself. My family don't know anything of this yet, nor the reason. Private papers in envelope in my coat pocket for my son."

His widow and daughter in New York and the son in this city survive him.

HANNA MEN INTERESTED.

A New Concern Formed to Take Over Massillon Mines.

Cleveland, May 30.—The Massillon Coal Mining company, which will take over a large majority of the mines in the Massillon district, on which options are held by J. J. Phillips, of this city, was incorporated by D. R. Hanna, T. E. Young, Andrew Squire, C. C. Bolton and S. Hitchcock. All the incorporators except Mr. Squire, who is attorney for the firm, are members or employes of the firm of M. A. Hanna & Co. The capital stock authorized is $1,000,000.

The new company will practically control the output of the entire Massillon field.

AN ARMY SKETCH

By WILLIAM HENRY SHELTON

IN THESE days of wars and lootings, when China is being despoiled by her enemies, when general officers superintend the division of the swag and dead Boxers flit from the battlefield to the arms of their ancestors with their pockets turned inside out, it may be interesting to recall how we did those things during that remote affair known to Americans as "the war." The looting was not always of the enemy. Uncle Sam was sometimes himself the victim. The incident I am about to relate took place in the fall of 1863, after the Gettysburg campaign.

I remember the camp of the battery in the angle of a wood, the officers' tents on the high ground at the upper end of a small field, and directly in front of them the park of guns with hastily constructed harness racks of poles alongside the canvas, where the men oiled the harness and polished the brasses, and the parallel line of dark colored horses at the picket rope, with a group of grays at one end, used for hauling the battery wagons and forge. We were somewhere in Virginia, and the month November.

It was a temporary camp, and the men had been allowed to take the great canvas paulins from the carriages, with which, over a frame of fence rails, they had made an irregular line of wigwams just within the edge of the woods. I was a humble sergeant, in command of the sixth gun at this time, and occupied the wigwam at the end of the row with another sergeant and two corporals.

It was just that time of year when the soldier's appetite is most vigorous. It was not exactly hunger that prompted the raid on the commissary, but a craving for luxuries. Our idea of luxury was a ham and an extra 50 pound box of hard tack. We could pound the hard bread into crumbs and fry in ham fat, which, well seasoned, made a dish fit for a king. One of the corporals, who is now the editor of a western paper, and myself left camp just after dark one evening armed with a hatchet and bound for the stores of the commissary of the artillery brigade of our corps. As we passed around the park of guns we noted the guard tramping silently between the lines of carriages and his fellow marching back and forth along the picket rope, calling now and then to a refractory horse. The glitter of campfires marked the ground of the different batteries and wagon trains, and half a mile away on the crest of a hill was the camp of the commissary, toward which we were tending.

The commissary had begun the erection of a log house, the walls of which were already breast high. From their shelter we were able to survey our field of operations. Fifty feet in front of us was the collection of stores ranged in two compact rows of boxes and barrels, under a roof of canvas. The stores formed the sides of the tent, piled up to the eaves, and through the open center streamed the light from a fire of rails, where the infantry guard was listening to the yarns of a group of teamsters who were smoking their pipes and drinking their quart cups of coffee.

There was a box of hard bread on the top and end of the wall of stores, and to this Corporal E. made his way, keeping the boxes and barrels between him and the group at the fire. The canvas paulin was drawn over the top of the coveted box and corded out to a stake.

Slowly and patiently the corporal worked, gradually sliding out the box until an unavoidable grating of the canvas stopped the conversation about the fire. The corporal sat down in the shadow until the alarm was over.

"It's nothin but the wind," said one of the teamsters, upon which the stories about the campfire were resumed. When he had finally secured the prize, the corporal brought it back behind the log wall. After a whispered consultation I started for camp with the 50 pound box of hard bread on my shoulder, leaving him the hatchet and the more difficult task of securing the ham. I had been comfortably in bed for some time, lazily watching the smoldering logs and listening for the corporal's return. I was just falling off into a doze.

"Are you awake, sergeant? Stir out the boys. I've got a barrel of sugar open over in the woods, and we must bring it all into camp at once. Here is a haversack full I tied up in my blouse."

After my departure the corporal had transferred his field of operations to the lower wall of stores, which he had reached by going back into the field beyond the bright light from the guard fire. Here the ground sloped rapidly down into a meadow bottom. With a great deal of patience he had finally succeeded in working out a barrel which he felt sure contained hams. After rolling this down the hill, always keeping in cover of the other stores from the group at the fire, and to a distance where it was safe to spring the head and examine the contents it was found to contain white beans.

An ordinary workman would have left the barrel in the field and probably abandoned the whole dangerous business. Corporal E. was not a man of ordinary methods. He was not the shabby fellow to leave a barrel of beans exposed to the night air, so with painstaking care he restored it to its place in the commissary's stock before trundling out the second barrel. If he had found the desired hams in this barrel, he would have restored the head after taking out one ham and would then have devoted another hazardous half hour to returning the remainder of the package to its original place. Instead of hams, however, the second barrel was found to contain sugar, and this the corporal rolled joyfully across the wide field into the edge of the timber, where he opened it with the hatchet and came into camp with the sample I have described.

Besides our own household we took the quartermaster and the harness maker into the secret, and before morning half the sugar was in grain bags at the bottom of the battery wagon and the other half nailed up in cracker boxes with the company stores.

In those days I served as company clerk in addition to my regular duties, and each morning after breakfast I went up to the captain's tent and made up the daily reports. After completing this duty on the morning following the adventure I have related, knowing that Captain R., with whom I was on rather easy terms, would hugely enjoy a description of our night's prowling, I told him the story to the minutest detail. "Just as I have often told you, sergeant," exclaimed the captain. "You'll fetch up at the Dry Tortugas some of these fine days."

"Of course," he continued, "that would not be of any consequence to me, but I should be sorry to have Battery L disgraced."

We were still laughing over the affair when there was a clatter of horses' hoofs outside, and the butt of a riding whip tapped on the tent pole. Throwing back the curtains, we confronted Major Mandeville, the artillery brigade quartermaster, and Captain X., the commissary of subsistence, who was a young swell from Boston. Each officer was attended by his mounted orderly. The military salutes were passed, and the major presented the commissary and his business, at the same time stating that a barrel of sugar had been taken the night before from the brigade stores.

"Now," continued the major, "I have had my wagon train searched, Lieutenant Stewart is having a search made in Battery B, the Fifth Maine and the Vermont battery are doing the same. Be assured, Captain R.," said the major, with excessive military politeness, "that I can't believe that you have any man in Battery L who would be guilty of such a deed. Nevertheless I am sure you will oblige my friend, the commissary, by having a search made."

"Certainly," said Captain R., turning to me. "Sergeant, you will see that a strict search is made in Battery L."

I stood at attention, saluted the captain in reply and, making a half wheel in great style, strode off to our wigwam.

The corporal had taken to the woods with the haversack of sugar when he had seen the approach of the cavalcade, and it is needless to say that my strict search was fruitless. More than one mess that winter had clear white sirup of our own manufacture, and the captain occasionally demanded to know if a strict search had been made in Battery L.

Memorial Week In 1861.

A war tragedy which fired the northern heart the last week in May, 1861, was the death of Colonel Ephraim E. Ellsworth at Alexandria, Va. When the Federal forces crossed Long bridge from Washington to the soil of old Virginia May 24, Colonel Ellsworth led his regiment, the Eleventh New York volunteers, or First Fire zouaves, to the heart of the city. On passing a tavern known as the Marshall House Ellsworth saw a southern flag flying from a staff on the roof. The impetuous soldier dashed up the stairway to the roof, followed by two noncombatants. Private Frank E. Brownell remained on guard at the first landing below the roof. After tearing the flag from the staff, Ellsworth started down, but was met on the way by the hotel proprietor, James T. Jackson, who shot him through the heart with one charge of a double barrel shotgun. The second barrel Jackson discharged at Private Brownell. Brownell was not touched and immediately put a bullet through the head of Jackson.

Looking Backward Forty Years.

Looking backward 40 years to the last week of May, 1861, what varied reminiscences spring up—painful, instructive, amusing. Everybody who was anybody had on fighting armor, and fighting blood stood at the finger tips. Victory—speedy, overwhelming, revengeful—was in sight, in fact untold thousands of bumptious striplings were afraid the war wouldn't last long enough for them to smell gunpowder. Recruits rushed wildly to every arm of the service—any way to get a gun and uniform. Such guns and such uniforms! The state arsenals usually had militia gray clothing, the same hue as that adopted by the Confederates. Rifles were scarce, and for the first couple of years tens of thousands carried the old flintlock muskets changed to percussion locks, issued to recruits in May, 1861. In the west good rifles were so scarce that the captors of Vicksburg were glad to get the Enfield rifles found in the Confederate camps. These had been imported from England.

In 1861 the government was slow to accept cavalry and artillery, and many squadrons and batteries recruited in May were compelled to wait many months before the government would take them in. Not a war for cavalry and artillery, thought the military minds in Washington.

Grant, in May, 1861, was an unsuccessful seeker for a position suitable to his training; Sherman was in Washington, adviser to Scott; Sheridan a second lieutenant on the Pacific coast.

THE 25 ct. FAMILY DOCTOR.

CEDAR SPRINGS, MICH.

Mrs. Isaac Dunham, a well-known lady of that place, writes: "I cannot praise Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills too much. They did for me what doctors and other medicines could not do. I was troubled with severe disorders of the kidneys and enlargement of the liver. My family doctor treated me the whole of last winter, but did not help me very much, so I gave him up and began using Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. The result was simply wonderful. I am now strong and healthy again, thanks to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills."

EATON RAPIDS, MICH.

Mrs. Rose Chaffee, a business woman of Eaton Rapids, writes: "For a long time my system was in a terribly weakened state. Biliousness, severe indigestion and kidney troubles made me so miserable that I was hardly able to work. A friend told me of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and I found them just as represented. They restored my health to me, and I think they are a wonderful medicine."

The marked success of Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills with Backache, Kidney Trouble, Constipation, Headache and Stomach Weakness make them a family requisite. 25 cts. a box.

MARTIN MODERATOR

Chosen by Reformed Presbyterian Synod, at Pittsburg.

WAS CHOSEN BY ACCLAMATION.

Rev. Samuel McNaugher, of Allegheny City, Pa., Elected Assistant Clerk, Owing to Sproull's Absence—Delegates From U. S. and Canada.

Pittsburg, May 30.—The general synod of the Reformed Presbyterian Church of America convened in the Eighth Street church of the denomination in this city. The synod was called to order by the moderator, the Rev. Dr. F. M. Foster, of New York, and a motion was passed fixing the time of the annual sermon as last evening about 7:30 o'clock.

After the opening prayer had been made by the moderator, a roll call showed the presence of over 200 delegates, both lay and clerical, from all parts of the United States and Canada. The first matter taken up by the synod as an organized body was the transaction of unfinished business, which had been left in the hands of special committees at the last synod.

The Rev. Samuel McNaugher, of Allegheny, was elected assistant clerk pro tem to assist in completing the roll, owing to the absence of the Rev. T. C. Sproull, the regular assistant clerk. The moderator called for nominations for the new moderator, and the Rev. D. C. Martin, of the East End, was nominated by the Rev. Thomas McFall, of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia. It was moved and seconded that the nomination be made by acclamation. This was carried, and Mr. Martin was unanimously elected.

U. P. ASSEMBLY ENDS.

Meets Next Year In Pittsburg—Appropriations Made—McMillin Honored.

Des Moines, Ia., May 30.—The general assembly of the United Presbyterian Church of North America adjourned, to meet next year at Pittsburg. Appropriations from the treasury were made during the session as follows:

Foreign missions, $140,249; home missions, $100,550; freedmen's missions, $53,000; church extension, $55,000; education, colleges and seminaries, $25,000; other educational, $8,000; ministerial relief, $10,000; assembly fund, $7,000; publication, $500. Dr. W. H. McMillin, of Allegheny, was named to represent the assembly on the board of trustees of Christian Endeavor society.

The committee of the assembly on bills and overtures on the membership covenant reported that there was a demand for a change in the form of questions put when members are being received. The committee held, however, that none of the memorials submitted covers all the points desired, and recommended that a committee of five shall be appointed to frame a membership covenant and submit it to the next general assembly. The recommendations were adopted. The committee on nominations will select this committee, which is to report not later than Jan. 1, 1902.

The assembly voted against the recommendation of Rev. Dr. Samuel Collins for the appointment of a committee to prepare a list of consanguinity and affinity within which marriage shall not be contracted.

China Would Have Had to Pay If Delaying Settlement.

THE DRAGON THEN YIELDED.

Agreed to Pay Indemnities of 450,000,000 Taels, Equivalent to About $337,000,000, at Present Rate of Exchange.

Washington, May 30.—The department of state has been informed reliably that the Chinese government has issued a decree agreeing to pay an indemnity of 450,000,000 taels, equivalent to about $337,000,000 at the present rate of exchange. It is known now that the whole subject of indemnity will be closed up before the end of the present month. If that is not done and evacuation is not under way on a large scale, then the Chinese government must be assessed $1,000,000 each day after June 1 next, to compensate the powers for the maintenance of their military forces in China. Under this whip the Chinese government has been forced to yield. It is not known that the powers have agreed on the form and extent of guarantee, but now that the amount of indemnity is fixed not much difficulty is expected on this score.

The United States government has not taken part in the selection of a military commandant to succeed Field Marshal Count von Waldersee in the supreme command at Pekin. Having dispensed with our military force in China, the United States is not concerned in the personality of the military chief. Our legation guard will not owe allegiance or obedience to any foreign commander, but will be answerable solely to the United States minister or charge. In the event of common peril the several legation guards may unite for the common defense, in which case they may select their own leader, as they did during the defense of the legationers last year.

AMERICA MAY APPROVE.

Cubans Placed Construction on Platt Amendment, Which Must Be Considered.

Washington, May 30.—Secretary Root has received a cablegram from General Wood, at Havana, briefly confirming the press report of the adoption, by a vote of 15 yeas to 14 nays, the report of the committee on relations with the United States, accepting in behalf of the convention the terms of the Platt amendment. It is not possible at this moment to secure here even an abstract of the resolutions adopted. It is understood that without undertaking materially to change the language of the Platt amendment the convention, by the addition of reports of interviews with Secretary Root and otherwise, has placed upon the amendment itself, a construction that will require very serious consideration.

Secretary Root has been in daily communication by cable with General Wood, and is acquainted with the proceedings of the delegates and the negotiations which led up to this action. General Wood, in turn, has acquainted the constitutional delegates with the secretary's views in answer to their efforts to place a construction upon the Platt amendment. Hence the weight of opinion inclines to the belief that even as it stands the convention's action will not be disapproved from Washington. It is suggested by the officials that there is no occasion at present for the Washington government to take action upon this matter, either by accepting or rejecting the convention's work.

GEORGE D. RISE SUICIDED.

Drank Poison on Train and Died In Station at Lebanon, Pa.

Lebanon, Pa., May 30.—George D. Rise, proprietor of the Lebanon house, 257 West Fourteenth street, New York, committed suicide. He drank a poisonous fluid while on a train from New York bound for this city, and died in the baggage room at Lebanon station. Deceased was a resident of this city for about a quarter of a century or more and held the positions of bank teller and cashier and was well known in banking circles throughout the state.

The following unaddressed and unsigned note was found in his pocket: 'I am George D. Rise, of Lebanon Pa. Take me there and send word to my son there, Harry D. Rise, No. 142 North Eighth street. I have lost everything and I scarcely know what I am doing. I have taken cyanide of potassium or pistol to end my troubles. No one to blame but myself. My family don't know anything of this yet, nor the reason. Private papers in envelope in my coat pocket for my son.'"

His widow and daughter in New York and the son in this city survive him.

AN ARMY SKETCH

By WILLIAM HENRY SHELTON

IN THESE days of wars and lootings, when China is being despoiled by her enemies, when general officers superintend the division of the swag and dead Boxers flit from the battlefield to the arms of their ancestors with their pockets turned inside out, it may be interesting to recall how we did those things during that remote affair known to Americans as "the war." The looting was not always of the enemy. Uncle Sam was sometimes himself the victim. The incident I am about to relate took place in the fall of 1863, after the Gettysburg campaign.

I remember the camp of the battery in the angle of a wood, the officers' tents on the high ground at the upper end of a small field, and directly in front of them the park of guns with hastily constructed harness racks of poles alongside the canvas, where the men oiled the harness and polished the brasses, and the parallel line of dark colored horses at the picket rope, with a group of grays at one end, used for hauling the battery wagons and forge. We were somewhere in Virginia, and the month November.

It was a temporary camp, and the men had been allowed to take the great canvas paulins from the carriages, with which, over a frame of fence rails, they had made an irregular line of wigwams just within the edge of the woods. I was a humble sergeant, in command of the sixth gun at this time, and occupied the wigwam at the end of the row with another sergeant and two corporals.

Our idea of luxury was a ham and an extra 50 pound box of hard tack. We could pound the hard bread into crumbs and fry in ham fat, which, well seasoned, made a dish fit for a king. One of the corporals, who is now the editor of a western paper, and myself left camp just after dark one evening armed with a hatchet and bound for the stores of the commissary of the artillery brigade of our corps. As we passed around the park of guns we noted the guard tramping silently between the lines of carriages and his fellow marching back and forth along the picket rope, calling now and then to a refractory horse. The glitter of campfires marked the ground of the different batteries and wagon trains, and half a mile away on the crest of a hill was the camp of the commissary, toward which we were tending.

Private Frank E. Brownell remained on guard at the first landing below the roof. After tearing the flag from the staff, Ellsworth started down, but was met on the way by the hotel proprietor, James T. Jackson, who shot him through the heart with one charge of a double barrel shotgun. The second barrel Jackson discharged at Private Brownell. Brownell was not touched and immediately put a bullet through the head of Jackson.

Looking Backward Forty Years.

Looking backward 40 years to the last week of May, 1861, what varied reminiscences spring up—painful, instructive, amusing. Everybody who was anybody had on fighting armor, and fighting blood stood at the finger tips. Victory—speedy, overwhelming, revengeful—was in sight, in fact untold thousands of bumptious striplings were afraid the war wouldn't last long enough for them to smell gunpowder. Recruits rushed wildly to every arm of the service—any way to get a gun and uniform. Such guns and such uniforms! The state arsenals usually had militia gray clothing, the same hue as that adopted by the Confederates. Rifles were scarce, and for the first couple of years tens of thousands carried the old flintlock muskets changed to percussion locks, issued to recruits in May, 1861. In the west good rifles were so scarce that the captors of Vicksburg were glad to get the Enfield rifles found in the Confederate camps. These had been imported from England.

In 1861 the government was slow to accept cavalry and artillery, and many squadrons and batteries recruited in May were compelled to wait many months before the government would take them in. Not a war for cavalry and artillery, thought the military minds in Washington.

Grant, in May, 1861, was an unsuccessful seeker for a position suitable to his training; Sherman was in Washington, adviser to Scott; Sheridan a second lieutenant on the Pacific coast.

THE 25 ct. FAMILY DOCTOR.

CEDAR SPRINGS, MICH.

Mrs. Isaac Dunham, a well-known lady of that place, writes: "I cannot praise Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills too much. They did for me what doctors and other medicines could not do. I was troubled with severe disorders of the kidneys and enlargement of the liver. My family doctor treated me the whole of last winter, but did not help me very much, so I gave him up and began using Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. The result was simply wonderful. I am now strong and healthy again, thanks to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills."

EATON RAPIDS, MICH.

Mrs. Rose Chaffee, a business woman of Eaton Rapids, writes: "For a long time my system was in a terribly weakened state. Biliousness, severe indigestion and kidney troubles made me so miserable that I was hardly able to work. A friend told me of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and I found them just as represented. They restored my health to me, and I think they are a wonderful medicine."

The marked success of Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills with Backache, Kidney Trouble, Constipation, Headache and Stomach Weakness make them a family requisite. 25 cts. a box.

MARTIN MODERATOR

Chosen by Reformed Presbyterian Synod, at Pittsburg.

WAS CHOSEN BY ACCLAMATION.

Rev. Samuel McNaugher, of Allegheny City, Pa., Elected Assistant Clerk, Owing to Sproull's Absence—Delegates From U. S. and Canada.

Pittsburg, May 30.—The general synod of the Reformed Presbyterian Church of America convened in the Eighth Street church of the denomination in this city. The synod was called to order by the moderator, the Rev. Dr. F. M. Foster, of New York, and a motion was passed fixing the time of the annual sermon as last evening about 7:30 o'clock.

After the opening prayer had been made by the moderator, a roll call showed the presence of over 200 delegates, both lay and clerical, from all parts of the United States and Canada. The first matter taken up by the synod as an organized body was the transaction of unfinished business, which had been left in the hands of special committees at the last synod.

The Rev. Samuel McNaugher, of Allegheny, was elected assistant clerk pro tem to assist in completing the roll, owing to the absence of the Rev. T. C. Sproull, the regular assistant clerk. The moderator called for nominations for the new moderator, and the Rev. D. C. Martin, of the East End, was nominated by the Rev. Thomas McFall, of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia. It was moved and seconded that the nomination be made by acclamation. This was carried, and Mr. Martin was unanimously elected.

U. P. ASSEMBLY ENDS.

Meets Next Year In Pittsburg—Appropriations Made—McMillin Honored.

Des Moines, Ia., May 30.—The general assembly of the United Presbyterian Church of North America adjourned, to meet next year at Pittsburg. Appropriations from the treasury were made during the session as follows:

Foreign missions, $140,249; home missions, $100,550; freedmen's missions, $55,000; church extension, $55,000; education, colleges and seminaries, $25,000; other educational, $8,000; ministerial relief, $10,000; assembly fund, $7,000; publication, $500. Dr. W. H. McMillin, of Allegheny, was named to represent the assembly on the board of trustees of Christian Endeavor society.

The committee of the assembly on bills and overtures on the membership covenant reported that there was a demand for a change in the form of questions put when members are being received. The committee held, however, that none of the memorials submitted covers all the points desired, and recommended that a committee of five shall be appointed to frame a membership covenant and submit it to the next general assembly. The recommendations were adopted. The committee on nominations will select this committee, which is to report not later than Jan. 1, 1902.

The assembly voted against the recommendation of Rev. Dr. Samuel Collins for the appointment of a committee to prepare a list of consanguinity and affinity within which marriage shall not be contracted.

D., of Philadelphia, pastor for 50 years of the Trinity Lutheran church, of that city, and secretary and treasurer of the board of pastors' relief fund; Rev. S. W. SCARED BY A DOG

A Poisoned Animal Gave Mrs. John Joyce a Bad Fright.

Mrs. John Joyce was badly frightened yesterday afternoon near her home on Jethro street by a poisoned dog which ran into her yard. The canine was suffering intense agony and from its actions Mrs. Joyce thought it must be a mad dog. She quickly closed the door and locked it, but was surprised a few minutes later to see the dog lie down and die. The carcass was removed and no damage was done except to badly frighten Mrs. Joyce.

learned concerning the propositions which Mr. Travis will bring up before the board, it is positively known that a Boston shoe manufacturer and a Cleveland party, who is at the head of an extensive bicycle factory, have been in communication with the officials of the board with a view of locating here. A Birmingham iron manufacturer has also made inquiries which have given rise to the belief he is favorably impressed with the city and may be induced to come here.

EVENING NEWS REVIEW.

17TH YEAR. NO. 299. EAST LIVERPOOL, O., THURSDAY, MAY 30, 1901.—NOON EDITION. TWO CENTS

MEMORIAL DAY MORNING BRIGHT AND BEAUTIFUL

THE IMPRESSIVE EXERCISES

Arranged For East Liverpool Will Take Place According to Program.

ALL THROUGH OLD COLUMBIANA

Her Patriotic Sons And Daughters Are Strewing the Graves of Fallen Heroes With the Fresh Flowers of Spring—The Programs.

Memorial day dawned clear and bright, and at an early hour there were signs of unusual activity about Grand Army headquarters.

Decorating in the outlying cemeteries was finished up during the forenoon, the work having been done by committees from the Grand Army and Sons of Veterans. The soldiers of the Spanish-American war had a well organized arrangement for the decoration of the graves of their comrades, and carriages containing potted plants were used in hauling the flowers to the several burying rounds. After the various committees had finished their work there was not a grave in any of the cemeteries that had been missed.

By noon everything was in readiness for the Memorial exercises at Riverview cemetery, and the program to be carried out as had been previously arranged. Rev. S. B. Salmon, the speaker of the day, arrived in the city yesterday and is being entertainew by members of his old congregation in the East End.

All stores were closed throughout the entire day, merchants and business men, together with the citizens in general, entering into the spirit of the occasion in order to aid and encourage the old soldiers in the work of perpetuating the memory of our honored dead.

Members of the G. A. R., Spanish-American soldiers and Sons of Veterans will fall into line at their hall at 2 o'clock; at the sound of the bugle the school children will fall in line. After the wreaths and flowers have been distributed the line of march will be under the direction of Chief Marshal S. J. Lowry, and headed by the band will proceed to the old cemetery, where the G. A. R. and S. of V. wil lopen order, school children will march through, where a committee of the G. A. R. will meet them and conduct them to the graves to be decorated at the cemetery.

After decoration of graves the line will reform and march to the new cemetery, where a committee will meet the children and conduct them to the graves to be decorated.

L. T. Tarr will be the speaker of the day.

Georgetown Didn't Appear.

The Ohioville base ball team was to go against the Georgetown nine at Columbian park this morning, but the Georgetown boys failed to appear, much to the disappointment of their antagonists, who were confident of an easy victory.

GOVERNOR NASH IS SERIOUSLY ILL

His Condition at Present Little Short of Alarming to His Friends.

LIKE ONE WALKING ON AIR

Columbus, May 30.—The condition of Governor Nash is little short of alarming, in spite of the attempts of his immediate friends to discredit the reports. The best physicians of the city have been called into consultation and no two agree as to the approximate cause of Mr. Nash's collapse. The governor is confined to his bed, and, while his mental faculties are unimpaired, he has practically lost the use of his lower limbs.

One of the physicians in attendance prescribes absolute rest and inaction, ascribing the cause for the trouble to be a ruptured blood vessel in some part of the body. Another physician thinks it possible that some of the fluid of the spinal cord has been displaced.

Governor Nash says that he has no feeling and describes his attempts to walk as "walking in the air." His condition dates from the time when the train in which he returned from California was passing through Royal Gorge, 60 miles west of Denver, when he suddenly sank to the floor. He has had to be assisted to walk ever since.

TAX LEVY FIXED BY CITY FATHERS

TROLLEY LINE EXTENSION

With one exception the city solons attended in full the adjourned meeting of council last night. Thomas was the only absent member. The session was late in starting, but after work was once begun the business left over from the previous meeting was rushed through without delay.

A plat of lots owned by John Burford on Pleasant street was submitted and accepted, as was also another plat of lots on Calcutta road and Lincoln avenue belonging to Mrs. Elizabeth Smallwood. A plat submitted by Charles Smith was laid over until the next meeting.

The Bradshaw avenue assessing ordinance was brought up on second reading.

The ordinance providing for a franchise for the extension of the Calcutta road line of the East Liverpool Railway company from Riverview cemetery to the Thompson park was again brought up. Mr. Marshall objected to the passage of the ordinance on the grounds that the defects which had been found when it was first introduced had not been eliminated. He made a strong appeal to council to vote down the ordinance until the alterations had been made which were asked for.

Mr. Nice stated that he could see no reason why the ordinance should not be passed and thought it was an injustice to the street railway company, as well as to the residents along the route of the proposed extension to delay the matter.

Again Mr. Marshall took the floor and in plain terms defined his position in the case. He said it was no desire of his to delay the work, but he meant to look after the interests of the citizens and not the street railway company alone. He stated that if the ordinance provided for the extension of the Calcutta road line to the East End he would vote in favor of it; but he did not favor the purpose of the company to extend the line to the entrance to the park and allow it to end there.

Mr. W. L. Thompson was present and asked permission to speak. He stated that the street railway company proposed to eventually extend the line through the park and on to the East End, but owing to the heavy exptnse, Mr. Healy had not calculated on building the second extension until some time later.

It was finally agreed to add a clause to the ordinance providing for the extension of the line from the park to the East End, and on a motion by Mr. Cripps, which was readily seconded, the company was allowed until October 1, 1902, to build the second extension. The ordinance was then passed under a suspension of rules. The franchise will be subject to the same restrictions as those granted when the first street car tracks were laid in the city.

No other business remained for the consideration of the solons but the establishment of a tax levy. This, however, was the bone of contention, and the wise men knew it perfectly well. Before doing anything in the matter those of the august body who had a "two-for" in their pockets drew it forth and went to smoking, notwithstanding the rule prohibiting the practice. They had full permission to do so and no "kicks" were forthcoming.

The provision as made by Mr. Marshall in his list of figures relative to the establishment of a tax levy for a sinking fund was the only point discussed. Mr. Nice contended that it was not necessary that a sinking fund levy be made and quoted law to substantiate his claim. Mr. Marshall insisted that a sinking fund was absolutely necessary and that a tax was therefore essential.

It was finally agreed to drop the sinking fund allowance, and after almost an hour's figuring the levy for the different funds was decided on as follows:

General, 1.8; street, 1.2; sanitary, .2; light, 1.3; interest, .2; fire, 1.5; library, .3; park, .2. Although several alterations were made on the levy originally decided on by the finance committee, the total remains the same, while provision is made for a tax for park and library funds.

SHAMEFUL DESECRATION OF DAY SACRED TO HEROES

LINE ISLAND THE SCENE

A Large Number of Strangers Brought Their Game Birds There.

In spite of the precautions and exertions of the authorities, Line Island bids fair to be the scene of disgraceful desecration of Memorial day.

A gang of about 30 sports, each one carrying game chickens, left the westbound train at the East End this morning. They were evidently at a loss to know just where to go, but after holding a short conference they started for Line Island. They made no attempt at concealment, and while the conference was being held the shrill voices of the chanticleers filled the air with music.

Among the "sports" were several colored fellows, and the whole aggregation looked tough enough to successfully cope with a goodly number of officers should an attempt be made to arrest them.

The Hancock county officers were informed of the arrival of the law-defiers soon after the train reached the East End, and a determined effort will be made to stop the fight before it proceeds far.

It is known that several local sports sent cocks to the island early this morning, and also that several chickens arrived on the up-train last evening.

The sports claim that they have arrangements made by which a small steamboat will arrive at the island shortly before noon and that if the officers interfere they will go on the boat and finish the fights there, thus getting out of reach of state officers.

The West Virginia officers were informed some time ago of the fact that a cock fight would probably be held on Line Island today, and it was thought they would take action to prevent it. Either they gave no warning or the sports determined to defy their authority.

Sheriff C. F. Allison, of Hancock county, and Deputy Sheriff O. O. Allison were astir early. With about 15 men who had been deputized they started for the island at about 8 o'clock this morning, determined to arrest or drive away the crowd of "sports."

ISLAND DESERTED

Went to Mill Creek, Where Their Law-Defying Sport Is Reported in Progress.

By 10 o'clock the island was deserted by the sports and their followers. They had spies out and got word that the officers were coming. They made all haste out of West Virginia and went over into Pennsylvania in the vicinity of Mill Creek, where it is reported the cocking mains are in progress as the News Review goes to press. Crowds are flocking to Mill Creek.

Officer Morris, of East Liverpool, and Deputy Sheriff Chris Bick are looking after the interests of the city and county to see that no mains are held in Ohio.

LANDED IN JAIL

Has Been a Fugitive From Justice for Nearly Two Months—Charged With a Serious Offense.

William C. Trover was arrested at an early hour this morning by Patrolman Pat Woods and is now locked in a cell at the city jail. Since April 10 Trover has been a fugitive from justice, at which time an affidavit was filed in Justice Rose's court by Mrs. Trover, charging her husband with the commission of a serious offense against her 14-year-old daughter, Agnes Potts.

A warrant was issued for the accused man and turned over to Constable Powell, but before the officer could lay hands on Trover he made his escape and fled to Pennsylvania. The city police force and patrolmen were instructed to arrest the man on sight and late last night he was seen by neighbors lurking about his wife's home in Gardendale and Patrolman Woods notified, who took him into custody.

Trover will be given a hearing this afternoon.

Joe Keenan Attacked an Installment Agent, But Nobody Was Hurt.

Joe Keenan and an installment agent had an altercation in a saloon in the Midway last night, and for a time it looked as though the fight would become general, as both parties had a number of supporters.

The party adjourned to the street, where Keenan drew a knife and made for the agent. They grappled for a short time, but the installment agent concluded that the odds were against him and ran. No arrests were made.

SOMETHING GOOD

FOR THE BOARD OF TRADE TO DELIBERATE UPON.

Secretary Travis Has Two Propositions Which Promise Well—Large Audience Expected.

A surprise is going to be sprung at the board of trade meeting which will be held at the city hall tomorrow evening. This is the assurance given by Secretary Travis, who, together with President Croxall, has been doing his utmost to induce a good attendance at the meeting.

As exclusively announced in the News Review of last Monday, there are two propositions from extensive manufacturers which will be submitted at the meeting of the board. Mr. Travis, who has been working on the deals, stated to a reporter this morning that he never knew of an offer more fair than those which he received from the parties he has been in communication with.

Mr. Travis declined to explain the nature of the offers and stated he had agreed to suppress any and all information regarding the identity of the manufacturers concerned until the proper time has arrived. However, he stated that there was every reason to believe that two large industries could be secured for East Liverpool and that the bonus—which is generally the great drawback—is of minor significance.

Messrs. Rose, Walsh And Lynch Get the Base Ball And Foot Ball Privileges.

Arrangements were completed and the papers signed in the office of Attorney Travis last night, conveying the lease of the West End park to Messrs. J. J. Rose, Charles Walsh and Mike Lynch.

The gentlemen will have the base ball and foot ball privileges, and work on the improvements will be started at once. This will be done jointly by Mr. Aten, who holds the lease for the entire park, and the other parties. The grounds will be enclosed by a substantial fence, 16 feet in height along the railroad track and the east side of the park. Other changes will be made, such as grading, filling in and draining, so that the water can be kept from the diamond.

Mr. Aten reserves the skating privileges and the renting of the park for circus purposes.

NEGLECTED GRAVES

CANNOT BE SO BADLY NEGLECTED AFTER ALL.

Bodies Long Since Removed From the Old Graveyard to New Burial Places.

The report concerning the "forsaken dead" in the old Fifth street cemetery is denounced on every hand as a batch of misstatements. At the request of relatives of the departed ones whose graves are alleged to be shamefully neglected, J. M. Kelly has compiled a list of those whose bodies have been removed to Riverview cemetery. His figures show that 35 of the bodies removed were those of persons included in the list of the "desecrated" dead. Following are the names:

Sarah Hill, Harry Hill, Charlie Sebring, Mary Johnson, Elizabeth Boyce, Emma M. Croxall, William W. Devers, Mary Devers, D. C. Moore, Stephen Kent, Thomas Croxall, Hester Ann Knowles, Zillah Harker, Mary J. Morley, Ohio J. Smith, Mollie George, William Harvey, Margaret Brawdy, Thos. D. Blackmore, Elizabeth Blackmore, Harriet Blythe, Stanton Blythe, Josiah R. Gardner, Elijah Merchant, James Foster, M. H. Foutts, Flora Foutts, Lida R. Foutts, William Till, Caleb Till, Charles M. Thompson, Rosanna B. Farmer, May B. Farmer, Susan Colclough and Eliza Knowles.

In addition to the above list there have been perhaps as many more bodies removed from the old graveyard to the Spring Grove cemetery as to Riverview, and dozens of graves were made in the Catholic cemetery which contain the remains of those who were first laid to rest in the old burying ground.

It is asserted by many persons that of the 134 names of the dead alleged to be buried in the old cemetery not more than one-third of the bodies remain there at present.

TOOK FRENCH LEAVE

The Fire Station Boys' Pet No Longer Dwells With Them.

The boys at the fire station now mourn the loss of one of their pets. When Fred Martin returned from the Philippines he brought with him an animal plentiful at the islands and known as a mongrel, which he presented to the boys. They fixed up a cage for it and named it "Wallace." It has been a great attraction, large numbers calling at the station every day to see it, and it is supposed someone left the door of the cage open Tuesday night, and Wallace, not being overjoyed at his confinement, took French leave, and has not since been seen.

GOING TO WALES

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Jones, of the West End to Sail Tomorrow.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Jones, of the West End, will leave tomorrow morning for New York, whence they will sail on the Lucania for Liverpool, England, Saturday morning. From there they will go to their former home, Cwmfwodore, Monmoukishire, South Wales. It was in this city that Mr. and Mrs. Jones both spent their childhood days and from which they have been absent for more than 32 years. It was at this city that the first iron mill in the world was built, and here the first ore was mined and made into pig iron. This was in the reign of Elizabeth and from that time the industry grew until in Mr. Jones' boyhood days it is said the mills were within a stone's throw of each other through the entire length of Wales.

The first mill was erected by Richard Hanbury, whose descendants still reside at Cwmfwodore. Mr. and Mrs. Jones will also visit relatives and friends at many other cities in Wales. They will also visit London and other large cities of England. Their trip will extend over three months.

LOREE HEAD OF B. & O.

President Cowen Resigned His Position, but Is a Director and Counsel.

New York, May 30.—At the meeting of the board of directors of the Baltimore and Ohio Railway company John K. Cowen tendered his resignation as president of the company, to take effect June 1, and L. F. Loree, now fourth vice president of the Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburg, was elected as Mr. Cowen's successor.

Mr. Loree, it is understood, will appoint George L. Potter, now general manager of the Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburg, to the same position in the Baltimore and Ohio.

The Pennsylvania interests, while desiring to have a man of their own training at the head of the active management of the company, have been most desirous of availing of Mr. Cowen's knowledge of Baltimore and Ohio affairs. Accordingly he has been elected to the directory, Mr. Rea, of the Pennsylvania, withdrawing therefrom, and has been elected general counsel, succeeding the New York firm of Guthrie, Cravath & Henderson, that firm being retained as special counsel.

Mr. Cowen, on being asked what the changes meant, replied he thought the action of the board spoke for itself. He had resigned the presidency and would continue as general counsel of the company. It is understood Mr. Cowen is also to act as consulting counsel for the Pennsylvania system.

PRACTICAL ARBITRATION.

Lake Mohonk Conference Urged to Suggest Plans.

Lake Mohonk, N. Y., May 30.—The seventh annual Lake Mohonk conference on international arbitration was begun here. More than 200 delegates, representing many sections of the country, were present. Albert K. Smiley, the founder of these yearly conventions, delivered addresses of welcome.

J. H. Stiness, chief justice of the supreme court of Rhode Island, was elected chairman. Clinton Rogers Woodruff, of Philadelphia, and W. J. Rope, of Boston, were named secretaries, and Alexander C. Wood, treasurer.

The executive committee consists of John B. Garrett, Philadelphia; W. J. Coombs, Brooklyn; Robert Treat Paine, Benjamin T. Trueblood and Edward E. Hale, Boston; Judge Alden Cheser, Dr. Josiah Strong, Everett F. Wheeler, Judge John I. Gilbert, Prof. John B. Clark and John F. Anderson, New York, and Oscar Lapham, Rhode Island.

The chairman's introductory address was an exhaustive resume of what had been accomplished in the cause of arbitration, and an earnest plea that as nations were now in favor of settling disputes without war those present should offer suggestions of a practical character for such settlements.

Fostoria, O., May 30.—Bradner branch of the Mechanics' bank, of this city, was wrecked and $4,000 stolen. Two charges of high explosives were used by the robbers, the first blowing the outer door off the vault and the second opening the strong box.

Just The Blues.

Many a woman dresses to go out, feels irresolute, sits down, and falls into a fit of despondent musing. Ask her what's the matter, and she'll probably answer "Just the blues." And what are the blues? Only another name, in general, for a disordered liver and a diseased stomach. Cleanse the liver, heal the stomach, purify the blood, and there'll be no more blues. It can be done by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This medicine puts the diseased organs of digestion and nutrition into a condition of sound health. It eliminates from the blood all impure and poisonous substances, and cleanses the clogged liver. It contains neither alcohol nor narcotics.

"I had liver complaint for the past fifteen years, complicated with dyspepsia and gall stones," writes Mrs. N. Bernier, of 461 Elm St., Oshkosh, Wis. "I doctored with seven of our prominent doctors, and not one or all of them have done me the good, nor begun to do what your medicines have. I have used three bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, one vial of his 'Pleasant Pellets, and one bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and have gained about eighteen pounds since I first began to take these remedies."

Major Batson is negotiating with the emissaries of General Cailles at Santa Cruz.

Lieutenant Townley, in his testimony, admitted that he asked a contracting firm to contribute to Captain Reed (formerly depot commissary at Manila) $2,000 and a percentage on future business toward covering Major Davis' shortage. The defense was that the motive was purely to shield a brother officer.

SECOND APPEARANCE OF SMALLPOX AT HOMEWORTH

Homeworth, May 30.—(Special)—Great excitement prevails here as the result of the discovery of a second case of smallpox in the family of Joseph Klopfenstein.

Several weeks ago Mrs. Klopfenstein was visiting in Cleveland and contracted the disease there. She came home and the house was quarantined until it was thought she had fully recovered and all danger from contagion removed. Last week a daughter was attacked by the malady and is now in a very serious condition. Two physicians are in attendance.

There is great danger of the disease gaining a foothold, as after the quarantine was removed and until the daughter was confined to her bed the family had circulated through the community, unconscious of the danger they had lurking with them. Grave fears prevail that other cases will develop.

NEGLECTED GRAVES

CANNOT BE SO BADLY NEGLECTED AFTER ALL.

Bodies Long Since Removed From the Old Graveyard to New Burial Places.

The report concerning the "forsaken dead" in the old Fifth street cemetery is denounced on every hand as a batch of misstatements. At the request of relatives of the departed ones whose graves are alleged to be shamefully neglected, J. M. Kelly has compiled a list of those whose bodies have been removed to Riverview cemetery. His figures show that 35 of the bodies removed were those of persons included in the list of the "desecrated" dead. Following are the names:

Sarah Hill, Harry Hill, Charlie Sebring, Mary Johnson, Elizabeth Boyce, Emma M. Croxall, William W. Devers, Mary Devers, D. C. Moore, Stephen Kent, Thomas Croxall, Hester Ann Knowles, Zillah Harker, Mary J. Morley, Ohio J. Smith, Mollie George, William Harvey, Margaret Brawdy, Thos. D. Blackmore, Elizabeth Blackmore, Harriet Blythe, Stanton Blythe, Josiah R. Gardner, Elijah Merchant, James Foster, M. H. Foutts, Flora Foutts, Lida R. Foutts, William Till, Caleb Till, Charles M. Thompson, Rosanna B. Farmer, May B. Farmer, Susan Colclough and Eliza Knowles.

In addition to the above list there have been perhaps as many more bodies removed from the old graveyard to the Spring Grove cemetery as to Riverview, and dozens of graves were made in the Catholic cemetery which contain the remains of those who were first laid to rest in the old burying ground.

It is asserted by many persons that of the 134 names of the dead alleged to be buried in the old cemetery not more than one-third of the bodies remain there at present.

TOOK FRENCH LEAVE

The Fire Station Boys' Pet No Longer Dwells With Them.

The boys at the fire station now mourn the loss of one of their pets. When Fred Martin returned from the Philippines he brought with him an animal plentiful at the islands and known as a mongrel, which he presented to the boys. They fixed up a cage for it and named it "Wallace." It has been a great attraction, large numbers calling at the station every day to see it, and it is supposed someone left the door of the cage open Tuesday night, and Wallace, not being overjoyed at his confinement, took French leave, and has not since been seen.

GOING TO WALES

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Jones, of the West End to Sail Tomorrow.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Jones, of the West End, will leave tomorrow morning for New York, whence they will sail on the Lucania for Liverpool, England, Saturday morning. From there they will go to their former home, Cwmfwodore, Monmoukishire, South Wales. It was in this city that Mr. and Mrs. Jones both spent their childhood days and from which they have been absent for more than 32 years. It was at this city that the first iron mill in the world was built, and here the first ore was mined and made into pig iron. This was in the reign of Elizabeth and from that time the industry grew until in Mr. Jones' boyhood days it is said the mills were within a stone's throw of each other through the entire length of Wales.

The first mill was erected by Richard Hanbury, whose descendants still reside at Cwmfwodore. Mr. and Mrs. Jones will also visit relatives and friends at many other cities in Wales. They will also visit London and other large cities of England. Their trip will extend over three months.

LOREE HEAD OF B. & O.

President Cowen Resigned His Position, but Is a Director and Counsel.

New York, May 30.—At the meeting of the board of directors of the Baltimore and Ohio Railway company John K. Cowen tendered his resignation as president of the company, to take effect June 1, and L. F. Loree, now fourth vice president of the Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburg, was elected as Mr. Cowen's successor.

Mr. Loree, it is understood, will appoint George L. Potter, now general manager of the Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburg, to the same position in the Baltimore and Ohio.

The Pennsylvania interests, while desiring to have a man of their own training at the head of the active management of the company, have been most desirous of availing of Mr. Cowen's knowledge of Baltimore and Ohio affairs. Accordingly he has been elected to the directory, Mr. Rea, of the Pennsylvania, withdrawing therefrom, and has been elected general counsel, succeeding the New York firm of Guthrie, Cravath & Henderson, that firm being retained as special counsel.

Mr. Cowen, on being asked what the changes meant, replied he thought the action of the board spoke for itself. He had resigned the presidency and would continue as general counsel of the company. It is understood Mr. Cowen is also to act as consulting counsel for the Pennsylvania system.

PRACTICAL ARBITRATION.

Lake Mohonk Conference Urged to Suggest Plans.

Lake Mohonk, N. Y., May 30.—The seventh annual Lake Mohonk conference on international arbitration was begun here. More than 200 delegates, representing many sections of the country, were present. Albert K. Smiley, the founder of these yearly conventions, delivered addresses of welcome.

J. H. Stiness, chief justice of the supreme court of Rhode Island, was elected chairman. Clinton Rogers Woodruff, of Philadelphia, and W. J. Rope, of Boston, were named secretaries, and Alexander C. Wood, treasurer.

The executive committee consists of John B. Garrett, Philadelphia; W. J. Coombs, Brooklyn; Robert Treat Paine, Benjamin T. Trueblood and Edward E. Hale, Boston; Judge Alden Cheser, Dr. Josiah Strong, Everett F. Wheeler, Judge John I. Gilbert, Prof. John B. Clark and John F. Anderson, New York, and Oscar Lapham, Rhode Island.

The chairman's introductory address was an exhaustive resume of what had been accomplished in the cause of arbitration, and an earnest plea that as nations were now in favor of settling disputes without war those present should offer suggestions of a practical character for such settlements.

Burglars Blew Up a Safe In an Ohio Town—Got Away With $10,000.

Fostoria, O., May 30.—Bradner branch of the Mechanics' bank, of this city, was wrecked and $4,000 stolen. Two charges of high explosives were used by the robbers, the first blowing the outer door off the vault and the second opening the strong box.

Watchman Denny fired two shots at the robbers as they left the bank, but they escaped safely on a Hocking Valley hand car. The entire glass front of the bank building was blown out and the walls were cracked. Burglar insurance fully covers the loss.

Just The Blues.

Many a woman dresses to go out, feels irresolute, sits down, and falls into a fit of despondent musing. Ask her what's the matter, and she'll probably answer "Just the blues." And what are the blues? Only another name, in general, for a disordered liver and a diseased stomach. Cleanse the liver, heal the stomach, purify the blood, and there'll be no more blues. It can be done by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This medicine puts the diseased organs of digestion and nutrition into a condition of sound health. It eliminates from the blood all impure and poisonous substances, and cleanses the clogged liver. It contains neither alcohol nor narcotics.

"I had liver complaint for the past fifteen years, complicated with dyspepsia and gall stones," writes Mrs. N. Bernier, of 461 Elm St., Oshkosh, Wis. "I doctored with seven of our prominent doctors, and not one or all of them have done me the good, nor begun to do what your medicines have. I have used three bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, one vial of his 'Pleasant Pellets, and one bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and have gained about eighteen pounds since I first began to take these remedies."

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure biliousness.

A SERGEANT SENTENCED.

Court Martial of Lieut. Townley Commenced at Cavite.

Manila, May 30.—Commissary Sergeant Henry Wilson has been sentenced to three years' imprisonment in Bilibid prison for stealing supplies.

The trial of Harold M. Pitt, manager of Evans & Co., charged with improperly purchasing government stores, has been postponed.

The court martial of Lieutenant Richard H. Townley for alleged participation in the commissary frauds at Manila, began at Cavite.

It is settled that the governing board of Manila is to consist of an army officer, a Filipino and an American civilian.

Major Batson is negotiating with the emissaries of General Cailles at Santa Cruz.

Lieutenant Townley, in his testimony, admitted that he asked a contracting firm to contribute to Captain Reed (formerly depot commissary at Manila) $2,000 and a percentage on future business toward covering Major Davis' shortage. The defense was that the motive was purely to shield a brother officer.

SECOND APPEARANCE OF SMALLPOX AT HOMEWORTH

Homeworth, May 30.—(Special)—Great excitement prevails here as the result of the discovery of a second case of smallpox in the family of Joseph Klopfenstein.

Several weeks ago Mrs. Klopfenstein was visiting in Cleveland and contracted the disease there. She came home and the house was quarantined until it was thought she had fully recovered and all danger from contagion removed. Last week a daughter was attacked by the malady and is now in a very serious condition. Two physicians are in attendance.

There is great danger of the disease gaining a foothold, as after the quarantine was removed and until the daughter was confined to her bed the family had circulated through the community, unconscious of the danger they had lurking with them. Grave fears prevail that other cases will develop.

MEMORIAL DAY.

The greatest Memorial day oration ever delivered was Lincoln's Gettysburg speech. It cannot be read too often by American patriots. We therefore reproduce it as the most appropriate sentiment of the day:

"Fourscore and seven years ago our fathers brought forth upon this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal. Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting place for those who gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But in a large sense we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it far above our power to add or detract.

"The world will little note, nor long remember, what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us, the living, rather to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us, that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion; that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain; that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, and for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

COMMANDER TAGGART'S ZEAL.

Department Commander E. F. Taggart, of Akron, has not been in office very long, but he has attracted considerable attention in his brief management of the affairs of the G. A. R. in this section of Ohio. On Tuesday he sent the following telegram to the mayor of Lancaster in regard to a proposed Memorial day athletic contest which the school boys of that town propose to hold:

"If the citizens of Lancaster allow the desecration of Memorial day by permitting their high school to hold 'a field day' carnival, your people are not deserving of entertaining our next encampment. The department commander enters the united protest of the Grand Army of Ohio against all such desecration on this most holy day."

The school boys were visited by the mayor of Lancaster and readily agreed to postpone their field day. They had meant no discourtesy to the G. A. R. and had chosen May 30 for their sports merely because the day was a holiday. It is probable that much of the alleged desecration of the day sacred to the memory of American patriots comes from similar thoughtlessness. Commander Taggart's zeal will doubtless be commended by his comrades. Still, there are worse ways of observing Decoration day than by engaging in manly sports.

McLEAN THE VICTOR.

The state convention of the Democracy is to be held in Columbus in July. This was settled at the meeting this week of the state central committee of the party. The decision seems to indicate that John R. McLean and no one else is boss. Tom L. Johnson, of Cleveland, wanted the convention held in the Forest City. McLean decreed otherwise and his order was obeyed. As a crumb of comfort Cuyhoga county was given the temporary chairmanship of the convention. The result is taken to indicate that McLean controls the state central committee and will control the convention and that Col. Kilbourne will be the Democratic nominee for governor. Republicans will be satisfied, though Democracy will not. Kilbourne will be defeated with ease and dispatch.

Some political observers are now predicting that both Tillman and McLaurin, of South Carolina, will lose their senatorial seats, the citizens taking the ground that the fight is the senators' and not theirs. Southerners evidently don't think a personal quarrel that is not settled at the pistols' point is settled as tradition and "honah" demand.

It is impossible to make a complete newspaper unless a complete day is devoted to the task. The News Review is not as complete as usual today, as it gives its force a half holiday. But for all that it is the best newspaper published in East Liverpool today, as it is every day.

He was engaged at drawing kiln and had an arm full of insulating wire which he proposed throwing into a box. His thumb and first finger of his left hand were caught by the falling wire and were badly lacerated. The wounds bled profusely and after the flow of blood was stopped he went to the office of a physician where the wounds were dressed. He will be unable to work for several days.

Eugene Swaney, employed at the E. M. Knowles pottery, had a narrow escape from being injured while at work yesterday afternoon. He had finished for the day and after sweeping up the scraps and putting them in a box started out to throw them over the bank. As he passed out of the door a loose brick fell, and just missing his head lit in the box. Swaney was badly frightened, thinking that some one had thrown the brick at him.

Two young boys employed at the Sevres China company engaged in a fight after they were through work Tuesday evening. The boys were joking with each other and it was claimed that one of them got mad and struck the other in the face several times, and he is now wearing a black eye.

It is announced on apparently good authority, that the Chelsea white ware pottery, of New Cumberland, will be put in full operation within the next two weeks. A force will be put on to repair the plant at once.

Claude Hendricks, a jiggerman at the Thompson pottery, is off duty threatened with an attack of fever. His place is filled by his brother, Harry Hendricks.

The Cleveland & Pittsburg yesterday placed a force of men at work tearing out the old switch at the Laughlin No. 1 pottery and placing in a new one.

F. Massey left this morning for Ford City where he has taken a job as rish maker in the pottery at that place. He was formerly employed at Murphy's.

J. W. Clark left yesterday morning for Anderson, Ind., where he will be employed for several weeks erecting new kilns for the Encaustic Tile company.

The contract has been let for the tearing down of one and the erection of three new kilns at the Union and work will be started the first of next week.

A carload of machinery to be used at the new pottery being erected at Sebring by Sebring Bros. was loaded and shipped to Sebring today.

The printers and fillers-in at the Sevres China company were compelled to loaf yesterday, there being a shortage of ware.

William H. Baker, who has been employed as a dishmaker at Sebring, has taken a dish job at the Murphy plant.

Thomas Farmer has accepted a position at the Dresden pottery working on the big jigger.

Samuel Wilgues has accepted a position making handles at the East Liverpool pottery.

Doan's Kidney Pills relieve backache,

East Liverpool citizens endorse them.

Mr. Thomas Laughlin, of 172 Sophia street, engineer, says: "I caught cold and neglected it. It settled in my back and kidneys and forced me to quit work and almost cost me my life. I could not move without suffering, and often could neither sit, stand or lie for pain. The secretions of the kidneys went wrong and distressed and annoyed me both night and day. I took medicines for two years, but did not get well. When I read of Doan's Kidney Pills I got a box at the W. & W. pharmacy. Noticing some improvement by the time I had taken the first half of the box, I continued until I had taken four boxes and my back was all right, as well as the urinary trouble. I will substantiate my statement of Doan Kidney Pills if any one will come to my house to investigate for themselves. My wife had some backache; she took Doan's Kidney Pills and was cured."

Well Dressed Stranger Victimizes a Livery Stable Keeper In Steubenville.

Steubenville, May 30.—Last Wednesday a stranger went to the livery stable of George Smith, on South Fifth street, and representing that he was an agent for the McCormick reaper and mower manufactory of Chicago, hired a horse and buggy to drive through the country, saying he would return on Saturday. He has not returned.

Fatal Brevity.

There is a little settlement of New Hampshire people in Kiowa county, Colo. Among other things they brought with them the New Hampshire aversion to using any more words in conversation than are absolutely necessary. Two of them met on the road recently and indulged in the following dialogue:

"Mornin, Si."

"Mornin, Josh."

"Turpentine."

"Mornin."

"Mornin."

A few days later the men met again, and here's the way a hard luck story was told in mighty few words:

"Mornin, Si!"

"Mornin, Josh!"

"What'd you say you gave your horse for bots?"

"Turpentine."

"Killed mine."

"Mine too."

"Mornin!"

"Mornin!"

BRUTE CREMATED.

Fearful Punishment For An Awful Crime, In Florida.

WHITE WOMAN NEGRO'S VICTIM.

Bartow, Fla., May 30.—Fred Rochelle, a negro, 35 years of age, who criminally assaulted and then murdered Mrs. Rena Taggart, a well-known and respected white woman, of this city, was burned at the stake here.

Negro Assaulted His Victim.

Mrs. Taggart, who was born and reared in this place, and was a woman of good family and reputation, went fishing alone in a small row boat that she kept at the city bridge over Piaco creek. This is in full view of the public thoroughfare. A few minutes before noon, desiring to return home, she rowed her boat to the bridge and made it fast. A negro man was fishing from the bridge at the time. Mrs. Taggart started home and had proceeded only a few steps in the swamp toward the open prairie and thence to the street, when she was approached by Rochelle, who had been hiding in the swamp. He seized her and she broke loose, and, screaming, ran from the swamp into the prairie, where he overtook her.

Murdered Her After Assault.

After the assault, while she was prostrate, he held her with his hands and knees, and, taking his knife from his pocket, cut her throat from ear to ear, causing instant death. He then walked to the negro who had been fishing on the bridge and who was thoroughly frightened and asked him what he should do with the body. He was told to leave it where it was, but, unheedful of this request, he took the bleeding form in his arms and carried it back to the swamp, threw it down and escaped into the interior of the swamp. In a few minutes the crime had been reported and in less than an hour practically the entire city was in arms and a well-armed posse was moving in every direction in search of the criminal. Bloodhounds were secured and all night Tuesday a fruitless search was continued.

Negroes Captured Brute.

About noon Wednesday a courier arrived announcing that the negro had been captured by two other negroes about three miles south of the city. Posses were immediately on the trail, but the capturers evaded detection and succeeded in getting their prisoner quickly into the city and in turning him over to the sheriff of Polk county. In less than 10 minutes after the transfer had been made the streets became congested with people, and the crowd, augmented as it marched, moved on the jail. In spite of the sheriff and a strong guard of extra deputies, who made every effort to protect him from mob violence, they secured the prisoner and took up the march to the scene of the crime. He was half dragged, half carried to the bridge, enveloped by a great throng of people, who were resolute and determined, but quiet and orderly. Scream after scream broke from the wretch's quivering lips, followed by groans and prayers for mercy.

Burning at Stake the Penalty.

The stake was the only suggestion as to the proper expiation of the crime, and without organized effort, and yet with apparently unanimous understanding, a barrel was in readiness and was placed by the stake on the very spot where Mrs. Taggart was assaulted and murdered.

On this the negro was placed and chained to the stake. He pleaded for mercy, but in the great crowd around him silence was the only response. There were no jeers, no swearing, no disorder. Before the chains around his body had been made fast, cans of kerosene oil from many sources were passed to the front, and one of the leaders stepped to the negro and slowly but deliberately poured it upon him and his clothes until clothes and barrel were well saturated. It was then about 6 o'clock in the evening. The crowd was growing and business in the city had practically been suspended.

Match Was Applied.

When the match was applied the blaze quickly leaped skyward. The burning body could be seen only as a dark object in the circle of a roaring flame. Then the fire slackened and the writhing body came back in full view, but already the groans had ceased, and the only evidence of life was in the contortions of the muscles of the limbs. For about 15 minutes the body burned and in about a half hour from the time of the application of the match only the charred bones were left.

Close Resemblance.

Mrs. Talkso's husband was reading an advertisement which asserted that "the mail is quick, the telegrapher is quicker, but the telephone is quickest, and you don't have to wait for an answer."

"Ah," he reflected, "in one particular that reminds me strongly of Mrs. Talkso."—Baltimore American.

HOME AGAIN TODAY.

MRS. M'KINLEY REACHING LONG JOURNEY'S END.

Visit of Her Sister and Niece at Canton, Cheered Her—Ohioans Enthusiastic.

Washington, May 30.—The president and Mrs. McKinley are due here this morning.

Pittsburg, May 30.—The last of the day of the homeward journey of the presidential party was a ride across the president's native state of Ohio. Only four stops were made, the longest at Canton, the president's home town, where the train remained for 20 minutes to give Mrs. McKinley an opportunity to see her sister, Mrs. M. C. Barber, and her niece, Miss Ida Barber. Quite a number of the president's old friends and neighbors were at the station and they were overjoyed to learn from the president's own lips that Mrs. McKinley's improvement had continued slowly, but steadily. Judge Day, the former secretary of state; John C. Deuber, Judge Baldwin and Mayor Robertson came aboard the Olympia, but did not see Mrs. McKinley. Her sister was with her until the train left, and her neice remained aboard. The latter will go to Washington, and, with her sister, Miss Mary Barber, who accompanied the party to the Pacific coast, will be the guest of Mrs. McKinley at the white house until she is able to return to Canton.

Many of the stations along the line of the road through Ohio were decorated with American flags. At Lima, the first stop in the state, the school children were given a half holiday to permit them to go to the depot to see the president.

Mrs. McKinley had a very comfortable day. It had been raining in Ohio for several days and there was no dust or heat to make the journey oppressive. The brief visit with her sister at Canton seemed to brighten her spirits and doubtless did her much good. The train arrived at Pittsburg about 7:35 p. m.

Additional Activity Noted In Market Wednesday—Profit Taking In Some Stocks.

New York, May 30.—There was additional activity in the market Wednesday and considerable strength and variety, but the dealings were still evidently in large part professional and the points of strength were somewhat scattered. It was noticeable also that profit taking was going on in stocks which have recently advanced under cover of the new points of strength. Thus, while Atchison, Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific and the Southern railway stocks were moving upward Wednesday, the Tobacco stocks, Lackawanna, the Wabash stocks, Erie and American Car were held back, although much less active than during the time of their recent advance. The strength shown during the day seemed to be largely due to special causes, but the favorable progress made in the London stock exchange settlement and the hope that its completion will clear the way for a growth of confidence was a favoring factor. Something was made of the absence of Northern Pacific convertible bonds, as indicating a prospect of a settlement of the Northern Pacific dispute.

Union Pacific stock did not move decisively, although it recovered well from a period of weakness without holding the entire recovery. April net earnings were an element in the strength of a number of stocks, and were supplemented by other explanations, posibly to further a speculative movement. Atchison's statement, published previously, was a continuing influence. The advance in Pennsylvania was made to appear in sympathy with a revival of the old rumors of a union in retaliation for the project of a Wabash trunk line outlet. The halt in the upward movement of Wabash and Lackawanna may have been significant in the same connection. Southern Pacific presented a very strong statement of net earnings, and Southern railway, Union Pacific and St. Louis and San Francisco also made good showings for April. There were, besides, rumors that announcement would soon be made of large Pennsylvania holdings in Southern railway and that the Chicago, Indianapolis and Louisville has passed to the control of the Southern railway. Reports were current that Union Pacific was extending its holdings of Southern Pacific so as to secure absolute control. The extra dividend on Minneapolis and St. Louis accounts for the strength of that stock. Pacific Mail's rise was in sympathy with Southern Pacific. The rise in Denver and Rio Grande was unexplained. The unfavorable features of the government's weekly crop report and the unexpectedly large gold exports were ignored. Gold engagements ran up at one time to $4,650,000. They were later reduced to $3,950,000 to comply with insurance requirements.

There was some irregularity in the bond market on a fair volume of dealings. Total sales, par value, $2,775,000.

Suit Against Mrs. Eddy.

Boston, May 30.—The jury trial of the suit of Mrs. Josephine A. Woodbury, of this city, claiming $150,000 damages from Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, of Concord, N. H., founder of the Christian Scientist sect, for libel, was begun in the Suffolk county superior court here.

The Resin Eaters.

"Resin eating," said a south Georgia doctor, "is a habit acquired by the Cracker settlers who live in the neighborhood of a turpentine still. The resin they use isn't the hard, shiny resin of commerce, but has been dipped out of the cooking caldron at an early stage of the process, and when it cools it can be kneaded between the fingers like wax. The backwoods resin eater will bite off an immense chunk and chew it placidly until it disappears. The heat of the mouth keeps it fairly soft, but if the chewing becomes too deliberate it is apt to 'set,' as they say, and cement the victim's jaws together in a grip of iron.

"On one occasion a big, rawboned backwoodsman who used to hang around a still I operated came rushing into my little office, clutching his face in both hands and making a horrible gurgling noise in his throat. 'What on earth is the matter?' I asked in alarm. 'His rosum's sot,' said another Cracker, who brought up the rear. I was nonplused at first, but finally grasped the fact that the man had been chewing a monstrous slab of resin and had thoughtlessly suspended operations long enough to allow it to solidify and clamp his teeth like a vice. We finally pried his mouth open with a chisel and broke a couple of molars in the operation. Next day I saw him chewing again."—Exchange.

The Torture of a Flax Shirt.

The most trying ordeal that Booker T. Washington was forced to endure as a slave boy was the wearing of a flax shirt. In his autobiography, "Up From Slavery," he says:

"In the portion of Virginia where I lived it was common to use flax as part of the clothing for slaves. That part of the flax from which our clothing was made was largely the refuse, which of course was the cheapest and roughest part. I can scarcely imagine any torture except perhaps the pulling of a tooth that is equal to that caused by pulling on a new flax shirt for the first time. It is almost equal to the feeling that one would experience if he had a dozen or more chestnut burs or a hundred small pin points in contact with the flesh. Even to this day I can recall accurately the tortures that I underwent when pulling on one of these garments. The fact that my flesh was soft and tender added to the pain. But I had no choice. I had to wear the flax shirt or none, and had it been left to me to choose I should have chosen to wear no covering.

"In connection with the flax shirt my brother John, who is several years older than I am, performed one of the most generous acts that I ever heard of one slave relative doing for another. On several occasions when I was being forced to wear a new flax shirt he generously agreed to put it on in my stead and wear it for several days till it was 'broken in.' Until I had grown to be quite a youth this single garment was all that I wore."

A GENERATION AFTER;

Or,

A Luzon Memorial Day.

By Joseph A. Altsheler.

Copyright, 1901, by Joseph A. Altsheler.

THE third soldier on the left was gray and old. His hair was short and thin, and his face was seamed by a thousand little wrinkles, crossing each other in a fine network. But there was nothing decrepit about his figure, which was spare, nervous and strong like that of an athlete. Even when he lay at rest his muscles were drawn and ready like those of a panther about to spring. He wore a faded uniform, and every line and angle about him marked the American regular soldier, alert and self reliant.

On their right lay a little village of huts, now lone and deserted, and from the dense tropical jungle on their left came the sound of the enemy's trumpet. The old soldier turned a little farther over on his side and, taking from his pocket a twist of tobacco, cut off a piece with his clasp knife and offered it to the young man beside him. When the youth declined it, the regular shook his head gravely and said:

"You make a mistáke, Jarvis. Tobacco is good for a soldier's nerves, and when he can't get anything to eat it's a wonderful sustainer of strength."

Then he put the piece in his own mouth and chewed with great composure and satisfaction.

The note of the trumpet, faint and far, came again, but the regular took no notice until the youth shifted restlessly and attempted to peer over a clump of thorn bushes in the direction of the sound. Then he laid two strong hands upon his comrade's blouse and quietly pulled him down.

"Don't do that," he said without anger, "because a Mauser bullet might come along, and then Private Jarvis of the Fourth infantry would need no more rations. You see, it wouldn't be fair to the government, which has fed you and clothed and paid you to waste your life in such a manner."

"I don't like this sort of war," said Private Jarvis impatiently. "Half the time I'm floundering in a thorn bush, and the other half I'm in the black mud of a swamp up to my waist, while the enemy is sneaking through the bushes with his Mauser ready to pot us."

"That's so," replied the regular. "War ain't a picnic anywhere, least of all here, where it's so hot and you've got to find the enemy and then catch him and hold him before you can lick him. Now, it was hot down there in Cuba when we went up the hill at San Juan, with the Spaniards blazing away at us like mad, but the Spaniard when he got his licking took it and quit, and then we became good friends. Now, here"—

He stopped suddenly. They heard far off in the jungle the sound of a crackling rifle fire.

"It's our skirmishers driving the enemy back on his earthworks," said the regular. "They're clearing the bush—doing the light work. The heavy job's got to wait, and we're not wanted yet. It's slow work, this lying here in the sun. I wonder what they are doing back in the States."

The boy Jarvis was silent for a moment, and then his eyes gleamed.

"I know what they are doing—at least in my part of the country," he said. "Don't you know what day this is, Wilson?"

The regular shook his head.

"How do you expect a fellow to keep track of time," he said, "when for days and days he's been following the little brown men in a Luzon jungle? We don't have a chance to rest and sleep, much less trying to think what day of the week it is."

"But I remember," said Jarvis. "It's the 30th of May, and it's Decoration day, the day when we remember those who fell in the civil war. Say, Wilson, over there in my home, way up in old York state by Lake Ontario, all the women are out today putting flowers on the graves of the old soldiers. The pretty girls are along, too, God bless 'em! I can see their blue eyes and brown hair and red cheeks now. It isn't so sad, you know; that war was such a long time ago that all the sting of it has passed. It was fought before I was born, and we just feel that they were all heroes together. We glory in 'em, and the grief is gone. You know how it is, Wilson?"

"Yes, I know how it is," replied the regular.

There was a sudden increase in the firing of the skirmishers and Wilson appeared to be listening intently, but his thoughts were far away and in a time long past. His face was too brown and seamed to show emotion, but there was a faint suspicion of a mist in his eyes.

"Yes, I know how it is, Jarvis," he repeated, "but you see I was on the other side, and I ain't got any cause to be ashamed of it. We thought we were right and your people thought they were right, and with only that little difference of opinion between us we made the grandest fight of it the world has ever seen. Well, it was over long ago, and those that were in it ain't got any bitter feeling toward each other. It's right that the northern people should decorate the graves of the men who fell, and in the south we do the same. Hark to that trumpet! They are still gathering. They know that we'll charge 'em pretty quick. Just as soon as our skirmishers and cavalry turn their left flank, it'll be up and at 'em."

Soft, but mellow and clear, the note of the trumpet once more came through the jungle across the marsh. The fire of the skirmishers swelled into a steady crackle.

"That trumpet is a signal," said the regular, "and it's like another but bigger signal that I heard a long time ago. Hear those shots over there? The cavalry are on their flanks now. We haven't got much longer to wait; then we'll swing forward as we did that day up Cemetery hill, but to a luckier end."

"It was hot then?" said the youth tentatively.

The regular laughed quietly.

"Hot?" he said. "Hot was no name for it. It was the road to the infernal regions. I'm a Virginian, Jarvis, and I was with Pickett. I was no older then than you are now. We were lying down on Seminary ridge, facing the Yankees on Cemetery hill and biding our time. We had been fighting there nearly three days, you know, Jarvis, but we, under Pickett, did not come up until the last day. Do you see any of 'em, Jarvis?"

"No. The skirmishers are still lively, but I don't see anything."

"It's still too early for us. There had been a tremendous fire of big guns, about 300 of 'em altogether, for an hour or two, and then they stopped all of a sudden. It was so still that you could hear an ant crawl. Then came the signal for us with Pickett to charge home to the heart of the northern army, and we did it. I say we did it, but we didn't come back—at least not many of us. It was about a mile across the open, and there were less than 5,000 of us going against the Yankee army of 60,000 or 80,000 men, though if it had been the other way I guess the Yankees would have done the same. That was the hottest and liveliest march, Jarvis, that 5,000 men ever made. They began blazing at us at once with the big guns on Cemetery hill and from the batteries that covered the hill called Little Round Top, and the bullets and the shells lashed us through and through. Hasn't that firing come a little nearer, Jarvis?"

"Yes. I can see two of our skirmishers crawling through the bush."

"All right, let 'em work; it's their time, and ours hasn't come. When we got across that valley, Jarvis, there weren't many of us left, but we went on all the same, and then the rifles began on us, 50,000 or 60,000 of 'em, but then they looked to me like a million. I couldn't see anything but black smoke and red flame, and as I went on I stumbled over the bodies of my comrades. Even now, Jarvis, I sometimes hear in my ears the roaring of all those cannon and rifles. Now and then when the smoke was driven aside by the blaze of the great guns we could see the northern batteries, and we kept straight toward 'em. We haven't much longer to wait now, Jarvis. There's the colonel across yonder, and he's drawing his belt a little tighter. That means that the charge is coming, and he'll lead it himself."

"I don't hear the trumpet any more, Wilson."

"No, it's sung its song for the day. The enemy are crawling into the earthworks now. As I told you, Jarvis, we went on up the hill and into the mouths of the Yankee guns. Oh, they were there all right enough waiting for us, and I don't remember much that happened then except a roar and a blaze and yells as if a million devils were shouting at once. All of our men who were left were killed or taken, and I fell down with one bullet through my leg and another through my shoulder."

"You were taken prisoner, Wilson?"

"Of course. When the battle was over, a tall young fellow with blue eyes and brown hair, just about as old as you are now, lifted me up and carried me into the Yankee camp. He brought me a doctor and until I got well he waited on me same as if he had been my brother. That was a curious young fellow, Jarvis—at least I thought so then, but not now perhaps. He didn't seem to have any malice toward us of the south, though he was fighting us with all his might. He had got a little wound himself in the charge, just enough to put him off active duty, but not enough to keep him from helping me. It was then that I began to find out that the Yankees were the same sort of men under the skin that we were. We'd argue the question of the war in the most peaceful way, just like two preachers. Then he'd tell me about his home way up north, and I'd tell him about mine way down south. Hark to that, Jarvis! The fight's swinging close."

The fire of the skirmishers grew fiercer. To the ears of the listening men came the occasional shout of the combatants. Overhead a coppery sun sailed in a sky of cloudless blue, and the air became closer and hotter. The deserted huts in the village looked like emblems of desolation. Everything betokened the coming conflict.

"Well, the Yankee nursed me for near a month," resumed the regular, "and I suppose that I owe my life to him—at least I feel that way. We must have had a hundred arguments about the war, and I never could convert him, and he never could convert me, but we didn't worry about that when we parted. I've never forgot, Jarvis, what that Yankee did for me, and it's one reason why when the war was over I concluded that as I had been fighting against Uncle Sam for four years I ought to fight for him awhile, and as a matter of fact I've been fighting for him ever since—years and years against the Indians out west and then against the Spaniards in Cuba. Take a last look at your Krag, Jarvis. We ain't got more'n two minutes left now."

"Did you know the name of the man who nursed you at Gettysburg, Wilson?" whispered Jarvis.

"Of course I did," replied Wilson. "His name was Philip Jarvis, and he lived at a little place called Hometown, away up in New York state, on lake Ontario."

"Why, that was my father!" said the youth.

"Of course it was," replied the regular, "and I've known it all the while. I knew it the first time I saw you, and that was why I took up with you. It was why I took the trouble to save your life at least a half dozen times here, for you were young, Jarvis, and you didn't know much about soldiering when you came. And it's why, too, boy, if I were back there with you today I'd help you decorate all them Yankee graves. Steady now, Jarvis, and we'll go together into the earthwork."

"Forward, men! Charge!" cried the colonel in a voice like the snap of a pistol shot.

"Now, lad, up and at 'em!" said Wilson in the ear of his comrade.

Street Car Bills to Be Quickly Crowded Through In Pennsylvania Senate.

Harrisburg, May 30.—There was introduced in the senate Wednesday afternoon a bill which will give corporations the right to construct either underground or elevated railroads in cities, boroughs and townships, and a bill which will give to street railway companies considerable more power than they now possess.

They were introduced by Mr. Focht, of Union, and Mr. Emery, of Mercer. Both senators are identified with the dominant faction of the Republican party in the state. Immediately after the bills were introduced they were referred to the judiciary special committee, and about 10 minutes later they were favorably reported to the senate, one by Mr. Sproul, of Chester, and the other by Mr. Grady, of Philadelphia. It was rumored around the capitol that it was the intention to have the bills read first time last night, second time today and passed finally in the senate on Friday morning. This, however, could not be verified.

One amendment in the Emory bill will give to a new company the right to use Broad street, Philadelphia, over the use of which there has been considerable contention in recent years.

Beyond the introduction of the Philadelphia railway bills and the reporting from committees of several measures, little was done, and adjournment was taken until 9 o'clock last night.

The senate immediately took up the consideration of bills on the first reading calendar when it reconvened last night. Among the bills read and passed were the two railroad bills introduced in the afternoon. The Focht bill was previously recommitted and some of the phraseology amended and some minor changes made. Unless the present program is changed both bills will be passed finally on Friday and will be messaged to the house Monday afternoon. The two bills have attracted more attention than any other bills, with the exception of the "rippers."

A bill introduced by Mr. Heinle, of Centre, Wednesday afternoon, which appropriates $10,000 for the erection of a statue of A. G. Curtin, Pennsylvania's Civil War governor, at Belefonte, was favorably reported from committee and passed first reading last night.

The senate adjourned until tonight so that senators can have the opportunity of attending the Memorial day exercises at Gettysburg.

Providing for a submission to a popular vote at the next general election the proposed constitutional amendment for personal registration in cities.

Among the bills reported from the appropriations committee were these:

State normal schools, $260,000; Altoona hospital, $15,000; Bradford hospital, $19,000; Ladies' G. A. R. Home, $15,000; Clearfield hospital, $4,000; Home of Colored Women, $8,000; Dubois hospital, $3,000.

Killed One; Injured Others.

Benton Harbor, Mich., May 30.—A passenger train on the Big Four ran into a gypsy wagon south of Niles, killing Ethel Whipple, aged 6. Her brother, Pabst, is badly injured, and the father, Charles Whipple, is badly injured. The accident occurred at a blind crossing and the wagon was not seen until too late to stop the train. The wagon was completely wrecked, but the horses escaped injury.

JUMPED FROM A CAR

William Clay had his left leg injured yesterday morning while endeavoring to jump off a car in the West End. Clay had a pair of scales in his hands and after the conductor pulled the bell he thought the car would not stop until it reached the corner of Jethro and Lisbon streets, and jumped off. He was thrown to the bricks with great force, the scales falling on his leg. He was otherwise uninjured.

China Would Have Had to Pay If Delaying Settlement,

THE DRAGON THEN YIELDED.

Agreed to Pay Indemnities of 450,000,000 Taels, Equivalent to About $337,000,000, at Present Rate of Exchange.

Washington, May 30.—The department of state has been informed reliably that the Chinese government has issued a decree agreeing to pay an indemnity of 450,000,000 taels, equivalent to about $337,000,000 at the present rate of exchange. It is known now that the whole subject of indemnity will be closed up before the end of the present month. If that is not done and evacuation is not under way on a large scale, then the Chinese government must be assessed $1,000,000 each day after June 1 next, to compensate the powers for the maintenance of their military forces in China. Under this whip the Chinese government has been forced to yield. It is not known that the powers have agreed on the form and extent of guarantee, but now that the amount of indemnity is fixed not much difficulty is expected on this score.

The United States government has not taken part in the selection of a military commandant to succeed Field Marshal Count von Waldersee in the supreme command at Pekin. Having dispensed with our military force in China, the United States is not concerned in the personality of the military chief. Our legation guard will not owe allegiance or obedience to any foreign commander, but will be answerable solely to the United States minister or charge. In the event of common peril the several legation guards may unite for the common defense, in which case they may select their own leader, as they did during the defense of the legationers last year.

Cubans Placed Construction on Platt Amendment, Which Must Be Considered.

Washington, May 30.—Secretary Root has received a cablegram from General Wood, at Havana, briefly confirming the press report of the adoption, by a vote of 15 yeas to 14 nays, the report of the committee on relations with the United States, accepting in behalf of the convention the terms of the Platt amendment. It is not possible at this moment to secure here even an abstract of the resolutions adopted. It is understood that without undertaking materially to change the language of the Platt amendment the convention, by the addition of reports of interviews with Secretary Root and otherwise, has placed upon the amendment itself, a construction that will require very serious consideration.

Secretary Root has been in daily communication by cable with General Wood, and is acquainted with the proceedings of the delegates and the negotiations which led up to this action. General Wood, in turn, has acquainted the constitutional delegates with the secretary's views in answer to their efforts to place a construction upon the Platt amendment. Hence the weight of opinion inclines to the belief that even as it stands the convention's action will not be disapproved from Washington. It is suggested by the officials that there is no occasion at present for the Washington government to take action upon this matter, either by accepting or rejecting the convention's work.

GEORGE D. RISE SUICIDED.

Drank Poison on Train and Died In Station at Lebanon, Pa.

Lebanon, Pa., May 30.—George D. Rise, proprietor of the Lebanon house, 257 West Fourteenth street, New York, committed suicide. He drank a poisonous fluid while on a train from New York bound for this city, and died in the baggage room at Lebanon station. Deceased was a resident of this city for about a quarter of a century or more and held the positions of bank teller and cashier and was well known in banking circles throughout the state.

The following unaddressed and unsigned note was found in his pocket: "I am George D. Rise, of Lebanon, Pa. Take me there and send word to my son there, Harry D. Rise, No. 142 North Eighth street. I have lost everything and I scarcely know what I am doing. I have taken cyanide of potassium or pistol to end my troubles. No one to blame but myself. My family don't know anything of this yet, nor the reason. Private papers in envelope in my coat pocket for my son."

His widow and daughter in New York and the son in this city survive him.

Phillips, of this city, was incorporated by D. R. Hanna, T. E. Young, Andrew Squire, C. C. Bolton and S. Hitchcock. All the incorporators except Mr. Squire, who is attorney for the firm, are members or employes of the firm of M. A. Hanna & Co. The capital stock authorized is $1,000,000.

The new company will practically control the output of the entire Massillon field.

AN ARMY SKETCH

By WILLIAM HENRY SHELTON

IN THESE days of wars and lootings, when China is being despoiled by her enemies, when general officers superintend the division of the swag and dead Boxers flit from the battlefield to the arms of their ancestors with their pockets turned inside out, it may be interesting to recall how we did those things during that remote affair known to Americans as "the war." The looting was not always of the enemy. Uncle Sam was sometimes himself the victim. The incident I am about to relate took place in the fall of 1863, after the Gettysburg campaign.

I remember the camp of the battery in the angle of a wood, the officers' tents on the high ground at the upper end of a small field, and directly in front of them the park of guns with hastily constructed harness racks of poles alongside the canvas, where the men oiled the harness and polished the brasses, and the parallel line of dark colored horses at the picket rope, with a group of grays at one end, used for hauling the battery wagons and forge. We were somewhere in Virginia, and the month November.

It was a temporary camp, and the men had been allowed to take the great canvas paulins from the carriages, with which, over a frame of fence rails, they had made an irregular line of wigwams just within the edge of the woods. I was a humble sergeant, in command of the sixth gun at this time, and occupied the wigwam at the end of the row with another sergeant and two corporals.

It was just that time of year when the soldier's appetite is most vigorous. It was not exactly hunger that prompted the raid on the commissary, but a craving for luxuries. Our idea of luxury was a ham and an extra 50 pound box of hard tack. We could pound the hard bread into crumbs and fry in ham fat, which, well seasoned, made a dish fit for a king. One of the corporals, who is now the editor of a western paper, and myself left camp just after dark one evening armed with a hatchet and bound for the stores of the commissary of the artillery brigade of our corps. As we passed around the park of guns we noted the guard tramping silently between the lines of carriages and his fellow marching back and forth along the picket rope, calling now and then to a refractory horse. The glitter of campfires marked the ground of the different batteries and wagon trains, and half a mile away on the crest of a hill was the camp of the commissary, toward which we were tending.

The commissary had begun the erection of a log house, the walls of which were already breast high. From their shelter we were able to survey our field of operations. Fifty feet in front of us was the collection of stores ranged in two compact rows of boxes and barrels, under a roof of canvas. The stores formed the sides of the tent, piled up to the eaves, and through the open center streamed the light from a fire of rails, where the infantry guard was listening to the yarns of a group of teamsters who were smoking their pipes and drinking their quart cups of coffee.

There was a box of hard bread on the top and end of the wall of stores, and to this Corporal E. made his way, keeping the boxes and barrels between him and the group at the fire. The canvas paulin was drawn over the top of the coveted box and corded out to a stake.

Slowly and patiently the corporal worked, gradually sliding out the box until an unavoidable grating of the canvas stopped the conversation about the fire. The corporal sat down in the shadow until the alarm was over.

"It's nothin but the wind," said one of the teamsters, upon which the stories about the campfire were resumed. When he had finally secured the prize, the corporal brought it back behind the log wall. After a whispered consultation I started for camp with the 50 pound box of hard bread on my shoulder, leaving him the hatchet and the more difficult task of securing the ham. I had been comfortably in bed for some time, lazily watching the smoldering logs and listening for the corporal's return. I was just falling off into a doze.

"Are you awake, sergeant? Stir out the boys. I've got a barrel of sugar open over in the woods, and we must bring it all into camp at once. Here is a haversack full I tied up in my blouse."

After my departure the corporal had transferred his field of operations to the lower wall of stores, which he had reached by going back into the field beyond the bright light from the guard fire. Here the ground sloped rapidly down into a meadow bottom. With a great deal of patience he had finally succeeded in working out a barrel which he felt sure contained hams. After rolling this down the hill, always keeping in cover of the other stores from the group at the fire, and to a distance where it was safe to spring the head and examine the contents it was found to contain white beans.

An ordinary workman would have left the barrel in the field and probably abandoned the whole dangerous business. Corporal E. was not a man of ordinary methods. He was not the shabby fellow to leave a barrel of beans exposed to the night air, so with painstaking care he restored it to its place in the commissary's stock before trundling out the second barrel. If he had found the desired hams in this barrel, he would have restored the head after taking out one ham and would then have devoted another hazardous half hour to returning the remainder of the package to its original place. Instead of hams, however, the second barrel was found to contain sugar, and this the corporal rolled joyfully across the wide field into the edge of the timber, where he opened it with the hatchet and came into camp with the sample I have described.

Besides our own household we took the quartermaster and the harness maker into the secret, and before morning half the sugar was in grain bags at the bottom of the battery wagon and the other half nailed up in cracker boxes with the company stores.

In those days I served as company clerk in addition to my regular duties, and each morning after breakfast I went up to the captain's tent and made up the daily reports. After completing this duty on the morning following the adventure I have related, knowing that Captain R., with whom I was on rather easy terms, would hugely enjoy a description of our night's prowling, I told him the story to the minutest detail. "Just as I have often told you, sergeant," exclaimed the captain. "You'll fetch up at the Dry Tortugas some of these fine days."

"Of course," he continued, "that would not be of any consequence to me, but I should be sorry to have Battery L disgraced."

We were still laughing over the affair when there was a clatter of horses' hoofs outside, and the butt of a riding whip tapped on the tent pole. Throwing back the curtains, we confronted Major Mandeville, the artillery brigade quartermaster, and Captain X., the commissary of subsistence, who was a young swell from Boston. Each officer was attended by his mounted orderly. The military salutes were passed, and the major presented the commissary and his business, at the same time stating that a barrel of sugar had been taken the night before from the brigade stores.

"Now," continued the major, "I have had my wagon train searched, Lieutenant Stewart is having a search made in Battery B, the Fifth Maine and the Vermont battery are doing the same. Be assured, Captain R.," said the major, with excessive military politeness, "that I can't believe that you have any man in Battery L who would be guilty of such a deed. Nevertheless I am sure you will oblige my friend, the commissary, by having a search made."

"Certainly," said Captain R., turning to me. "Sergeant, you will see that a strict search is made in Battery L."

I stood at attention, saluted the captain in reply and, making a half wheel in great style, strode off to our wigwam.

The corporal had taken to the woods with the haversack of sugar when he had seen the approach of the cavalcade, and it is needless to say that my strict search was fruitless. More than one mess that winter had clear white sirup of our own manufacture, and the captain occasionally demanded to know if a strict search had been made in Battery L.

Memorial Week In 1861.

A war tragedy which fired the northern heart the last week in May, 1861, was the death of Colonel Ephraim E. Ellsworth at Alexandria, Va. When the Federal forces crossed Long bridge from Washington to the soil of old Virginia May 24, Colonel Ellsworth led his regiment, the Eleventh New York volunteers, or First Fire zouaves, to the heart of the city. On passing a tavern known as the Marshall House Ellsworth saw a southern flag flying from a staff on the roof. The impetuous soldier dashed up the stairway to the roof, followed by two noncombatants. Private Frank E. Brownell remained on guard at the first landing below the roof. After tearing the flag from the staff, Ellsworth started down, but was met on the way by the hotel proprietor, James T. Jackson, who shot him through the heart with one charge of a double barrel shotgun. The second barrel Jackson discharged at Private Brownell. Brownell was not touched and immediately put a bullet through the head of Jackson.

Looking Backward Forty Years.

Looking backward 40 years to the last week of May, 1861, what varied reminiscences spring up—painful, instructive, amusing. Everybody who was anybody had on fighting armor, and fighting blood stood at the finger tips. Victory—speedy, overwhelming, revengeful—was in sight, in fact untold thousands of bumptious striplings were afraid the war wouldn't last long enough for them to smell gunpowder. Recruits rushed wildly to every arm of the service—any way to get a gun and uniform. Such guns and such uniforms! The state arsenals usually had militia gray clothing, the same hue as that adopted by the Confederates. Rifles were scarce, and for the first couple of years tens of thousands carried the old flintlock muskets changed to percussion locks, issued to recruits in May, 1861. In the west good rifles were so scarce that the captors of Vicksburg were glad to get the Enfield rifles found in the Confederate camps. These had been imported from England.

In 1861 the government was slow to accept cavalry and artillery, and many squadrons and batteries recruited in May were compelled to wait many months before the government would take them in. Not a war for cavalry and artillery, thought the military minds in Washington.

Grant, in May, 1861, was an unsuccessful seeker for a position suitable to his training; Sherman was in Washington, adviser to Scott; Sheridan a second lieutenant on the Pacific coast.

THE 25 ct. FAMILY DOCTOR.

CEDAR SPRINGS, MICH.

Mrs. Isaac Dunham, a well-known lady of that place, writes: "I cannot praise Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills too much. They did for me what doctors and other medicines could not do. I was troubled with severe disorders of the kidneys and enlargement of the liver. My family doctor treated me the whole of last winter, but did not help me very much, so I gave him up and began using Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. The result was simply wonderful. I am now strong and healthy again, thanks to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills."

EATON RAPIDS, MICH.

Mrs. Rose Chaffee, a business woman of Eaton Rapids, writes: "For a long time my system was in a terribly weakened state. Biliousness, severe indigestion and kidney troubles made me so miserable that I was hardly able to work. A friend told me of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and I found them just as represented. They restored my health to me, and I think they are a wonderful medicine."

The marked success of Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills with Backache, Kidney Trouble, Constipation, Headache and Stomach Weakness make them a family requisite. 25 cts. a box.

MARTIN MODERATOR

Chosen by Reformed Presbyterian Synod, at Pittsburg.

WAS CHOSEN BY ACCLAMATION.

Rev. Samuel McNaugher, of Allegheny City, Pa., Elected Assistant Clerk, Owing to Sproull's Absence—Delegates From U. S. and Canada.

Pittsburg, May 30.—The general synod of the Reformed Presbyterian Church of America convened in the Eighth Street church of the denomination in this city. The synod was called to order by the moderator, the Rev. Dr. F. M. Foster, of New York, and a motion was passed fixing the time of the annual sermon as last evening about 7:30 o'clock.

After the opening prayer had been made by the moderator, a roll call showed the presence of over 200 delegates, both lay and clerical, from all parts of the United States and Canada. The first matter taken up by the synod as an organized body was the transaction of unfinished business, which had been left in the hands of special committees at the last synod.

The Rev. Samuel McNaugher, of Allegheny, was elected assistant clerk pro tem to assist in completing the roll, owing to the absence of the Rev. T. C. Sproull, the regular assistant clerk. The moderator called for nominations for the new moderator, and the Rev. D. C. Martin, of the East End, was nominated by the Rev. Thomas McFall, of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia. It was moved and seconded that the nomination be made by acclamation. This was carried, and Mr. Martin was unanimously elected.

U. P. ASSEMBLY ENDS.

Des Moines, Ia., May 30.—The general assembly of the United Presbyterian Church of North America adjourned, to meet next year at Pittsburg. Appropriations from the treasury were made during the session as follows:

Foreign missions, $140,249; home missions, $100,550; freedmen's missions, $55,000; church extension, $55,000; education, colleges and seminaries, $25,000; other educational, $8,000; ministerial relief, $10,000; assembly fund, $7,000; publication, $500. Dr. W. H. McMillin, of Allegheny, was named to represent the assembly on the board of trustees of Christian Endeavor society.

The committee of the assembly on bills and overtures on the membership covenant reported that there was a demand for a change in the form of questions put when members are being received. The committee held, however, that none of the memorials submitted covers all the points desired, and recommended that a committee of five shall be appointed to frame a membership covenant and submit it to the next general assembly. The recommendations were adopted. The committee on nominations will select this committee, which is to report not later than Jan. 1, 1902.

The assembly voted against the recommendation of Rev. Dr. Samuel Collins for the appointment of a committee to prepare a list of consanguinity and affinity within which marriage shall not be contracted.

learned concerning the propositions which Mr. Travis will bring up before the board, it is positively known that a Boston shoe manufacturer and a Cleveland party, who is at the head of an extensive bicycle factory, have been in communication with the officials of the board with a view of locating here. A Birmingham iron manufacturer has also made inquiries which have given rise to the belief he is favorably impressed with the city and may be induced to come here.

Whether or not any of the three parties last mentioned have any connection with the propositions now in the hands of Mr. Travis cannot be conjectured. Nevertheless there is "something going to drop' tomorrow night and there will doubtless be a large gathering at the meeting to help boost the projects.
